British Call Up Reserves For Navy's Mock War

12,000 Men, 56 Ships Will Rejoin Fleet in August for Sea, Air Maneuvers

England Prepares

By the Associated Press

London, July 13.—Twelve thousand of Britain's 70,000 naval reservists and 56 reserve ships will join the fleet in August and September, considered by many a danger period for Europe.

Prime Minister Chamberlain announced the move today in the House of Commons. He disclosed the reserves would take part in combined fleet and air maneuvers—the most extensive ever carried out in peacetime.

Apart from the mobilization of the fleet in the Czecho-Slovak crisis last September, this will be the first time the reserve fleet has taken part in general maneuvers since the World War.

Another government step to speed defense preparations was a request for an additional $187,200,000 for the rapidly expanding air force.

New Loan Projected

Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir John Simon told Parliament tonight a new public loan of $1,638,000,000 probably would be necessary to meet increased armament expenditure.

The original budget figure for all government expenses for the 1939 fiscal year was $6,177,600,000, he said, but supplementary estimates—for the war office, the air force and the future ministry of supply—added another $702,000,000.

He estimated that armament for the year would cost about $3,416,400,000.

[With the navy and civil defense units expected to receive additional appropriations, the International News Service said, some unofficial quarters spoke of the possibility that the actual war preparedness expenditures for the fiscal year may exceed Sir John's estimate and may even approach the unprecedented level of four and a quarter billion dollars.—Editor's note.]

Although Chamberlain, in his re-

Italy Has Ceded Trieste to Reich, French Hear

Paris, July 13 (U.P.).—The government today heard, but could not verify, a report that Italy had ceded to Germany for ten years the port of Trieste on the Adriatic.

The report said Germany had been authorized to build in Trieste grain silos, new docks, an air base and a naval construction base.

Another Hot Day, Cool Week-End Forecast for D. C.

Despite yesterday's five-minute shower which plummeted the mercury 13 degrees at 5 p. m., from 87 to 74, Washington is due for another uncomfortably hot day today.

Tonight and tomorrow, however, the weatherman predicted the beginning of a cool, clear week-end.

Two hours before yesterday's short rain, the sun had raised the temperature to the day's high of 91, from a dawn low of 71.

Portsmouth, N. H., July 13.—Pure luck and skillful handling of their craft saved 20 Navy men from being thrown into the sea late today as the partially flooded submarine Squalus broke away from a salvage crew and plummetted back to the ocean bottom through a tangled net of lifting equipment.

The men were in two of the salvage vessel Falcon's whaleboats—ten to a boat—close to the larger craft's side when pontoons, air hose, buoys and the Squalus' bow shot skyward like a geyser without warning.

"Go back," men shouted from the Falcon's deck. The crews of whaleboats, who had been waiting to close the bow pontoons' valves when they broke the surface, rushed their craft out of the surge of water.

Like an Explosion

The Squalus had reared suddenly from the ocean depths like a giant fish fighting an angler's hook.

Thus, in one disastrous minute, seven dangerous weeks of salvage preparation were all but nullified. Hardly had the Squalus resettled, however, when the Navy began to build a new lifting effort. Preparations were made to work through the night.

Associated Press observers at the scene reported the wild flurry that threw the submarine out of control happened with all the suddenness and violence of an explosion.

At one instant it appeared from the surface the hoisting operations were within inches of success. The U. S. Probes Harlan Strife As One Dies in Mine Battle

By the Associated Press.

Harlan, Ky., July 13.—Federal investigation was ordered today in "Bloody Harlan" County's newest outbreak of coal field violence.

One miner was killed, a National Guard captain seriously wounded and seven others injured in a "pitched battle" at a mine and a subsequent street shooting yesterday.

Attorney General Frank Murphy, at Washington, said he was sending two Department of Justice agents to Harlan immediately. Decision to send the men, he said, followed a conference with Labor Department officials.

Several hours before Murphy's announcement, John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers and the C. I. O., in a letter to Murphy, charged Gov. A. B. Chandler was responsible for the fresh outbreak and asked Federal investigation.

Lewis charged the Governor was "violating his oath and prostituting the power of his State" in keeping troops here. He asserted Chandler was trying to "exact vengeance" because the C. I. O. supported Senator Barkley in last summer's Senatorial primary.

The Governor, at Frankfort, in reply, said the responsibility was Lewis', adding:

"Lewis has found one State where the people are not ready to be bulldozed. This is a new situation for him."

Chandler said Lewis' charge of "vengeance" was "ridiculous, absurd and absolutely untrue. Vengeance belongs to the Lord."

Attorney General Murphy said arrangements had been made to

Scenic River Parkway Rapidly Takes Shape

Aerial Tour Over 30-Mile Route Shows Work in Progress on Key Parts of Plan From Great Falls to Mount Vernon

By Gerald G. Gross

Now undergoing its most extensive alterations in history, the Potomac River and its banks gradually are being shaped into a waterway parkway system which will be one of the world's finest, an aerial inspection of the project revealed yesterday.

From Alexandria to Great Falls, one beehive of activity after another was noted, ranging from dredging operations at the Gravelly Point Airport "fill" to the manual labor of CCC enrollees 15 miles upstream, clearing the old C. & O. canal of debris.

Viewed from the Goodyear blimp Enterprise, the changes now in progress made it easy to visualize the completed development which, according to the planners, will be one of the Capital's greatest assets.

Major Links Rushed

With the George Washington Memorial parkway serving as a connecting chain, the major links in the Potomac program now under way include the rehabilitation of Washington Channel, construction of the National Airport at Gravelly Point, transformation of Theodore Roosevelt Island into a "forest primeval" for public use, expansion of Key Bridge, and conversion of the old C. & O. canal bed into a canoeist's paradise.

Step by step, as funds become available, the scenic 30-mile stretch between Mount Vernon and Great Falls is being turned into a utilitarian playway. Today the National Capital Park and Planning Commission will discuss two more steps.

These are Senator Carter Glass' bill, introduced a few days ago, for a toll bridge near Great Falls, and

Inquiry Begins In WPA Strike Intimidations

Racketeering Activities Noted, Murphy Says; 16,000 Are Dropped

By the Associated Press

Attorney General Murphy, discussing the WPA strikes in many sections, said yesterday that "there ought not to be a strike against the Government of the United States."

He explained subsequently that he believed the WPA protests were in a somewhat different category than strikes that could affect such security services as police and fire protection.

The Attorney General, at his press conference, said there had been some instances of racketeering in the strikes, but added that this type of activity was "different from the sincere type of protest, which is understandable."

He announced an investigation had been begun into reports that threats and intimidation had been used to keep nonstrikers from their jobs in East St. Louis, Ill., and said racketeering activities had been noted at Minneapolis and other points.

The Federal Government, meanwhile, dismissed additional thousands of the striking relief workers. By nightfall, more than 16,000

Murphy Expresses Hope Roosevelt Will Run Again

By the Associated Press

Attorney General Murphy, in a glowing tribute to President Roosevelt, late yesterday voiced the hope that the President will run for a third term.

"I personally hope very much that he would consent to continue," Murphy said at his press conference. "I know of no one of his attributes of leadership and courage to fight it out for the people.

"He has been the outstanding emergency leader in the history of our country.

"We are hemmed in by autocratic powers and have grave domestic questions, and it is his type of leadership that this country needs."

Senate Sets $25 Base for Age Pensions

28 States Providing Less Than $10 Face Severance; Townsend Drive Rebuffed

By Robert C. Albright

The Senate yesterday approved a social security act change establishing a minimum monthly pension of $25 for the aged needy in States that participate.

The amendment completely cut off from Federal old age assistance all States failing to contribute $10 as their share of the pension.

Approved by a 37-to-30 record vote, the motion by Senator Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, threatened 28 States now contributing less than $10 toward old age grants with complete separation from this phase of the program.

Bill Passed, 56 to 8

Action came just before the Senate passed, 56 to 8, the revamped social security bill carrying millions in liberalized aid for the aged and dependent, adding more than 1,000,000 persons to social security act coverage, and "freezing" pay roll taxes at 1 per cent each on employer and worker for the next three years.

A Townsend-plan effort by Senator Downey (Democrat), of California, to send the bill back to committee with instructions to report out a "proper bill" was rebuffed by a 47-to-18 roll-call vote after Downey had exhorted the Senate in defense of Townsend-pension principles.

Unexpected by leaders, Senator Johnson's successful eleventh-hour effort to raise State pension contributions virtually nullified the objectives of the Connally "2-for-1" amendment previously approved.

$40 Maximum Pension

Designed to aid low-income Southern States claiming inability to match the Federal Government dollar for dollar, the Connally amendment required the Federal Government to put up $2 for every $1 supplied by the States toward the first $15 of old age pension grants.

While applying the same principle, the Johnson amendment bars States from any aid that fail to take full advantage of it, and requires in addition another $5 State contribution to be matched by the Federal Government.

Thus, under the Johnson plan, the State must put up an initial $5 against the Federal Government's $10, plus another $5 each from the State and Federal Government, assuring a $25 minimum to needy old persons in States that qualify. Above this, if it wishes, the State can pay a maximum $40 pension, by putting up a maximum $17.50, against the Federal Government's $22.50.

In vain, Chairman Harrison of the Senate Finance Committee protested that States unable to raise an average $10 initial grant would be denied any Federal assistance.

"Senators from these States have been arguing they would rather have no pension at all than a dime-a-day pension," said Johnson. "I am just taking them at their word. My purpose is to get rid of these disgracefully low pensions."

Earlier, the Senate had defeated by a voice vote an amendment by Senator Bilbo (Democrat), of Mississippi, requiring the Federal Government to put up $30 toward State old-age grants, and had crushed a move by Senator Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, for $40 pensions out of the Federal Treasury.

Alien Ban to Be Considered

Chairman Harrison agreed to "take to conference" an amendment by Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, barring social security benefits to aliens.

Rep. Short Calls Roosevelt Library Plan 'Megalomania'

A sharp-tongued Republican Representative from the Missouri Ozarks stood in the well of the House yesterday and launched an attack on President Roosevelt so personally bitter that it was described as "the extreme nadir of partisanship in the Congress of the United States."

Denouncing a proposal to establish the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library at Hyde Park, N. Y., Representative Short (Republican), of Missouri, shouted that "only an egocentric megalomaniac would have the nerve to ask for such a thing."

Despite an afternoon of Republican opposition, the bill was approved, 221 to 124, and returned to the Senate with minor amendments. The measure authorizes the United States to accept President Roosevelt's collection of papers covering his public career; his library, including historical manuscripts, maps and pictures, and the major portion of his Hyde Park estate. The bill provides for Government maintenance of the library building, which is to be erected by private subscription.

In an address that temporarily silenced the House, Representative Short, a former preacher, told his colleagues that there had never been "such a public display of colossal conceit" as that shown in the proposal to set up the Roosevelt library.

"Not even the immortal Shakespeare or Milton or Wordsworth would have the unmitigated gall and brazen effrontery to ask that a monument be erected to them to house their precious pearls of wisdom before their death," roared the lone Republican from Missouri.

Bankers Offer Help To Meet D. C. Pay Rolls; Credit Use Held Legal

Financial Aid Sought if Congress Fails to Provide Funds Tomorrow; Roosevelt Plans Message in an Effort to End Impasse on Bill

While a Congressional deadlock yesterday threatened District employes with a payless payday tomorrow, Washington bankers took action to offer their help to tide over the Capital's 11,000 workers.

Prepared to do anything possible in this unparalleled emergency, officials of leading banks formed a committee to confer today with Commissioner Allen on methods of assistance.

The District Commissioners, meanwhile, were upheld in their insistence that the National Capital must continue to function normally as a city, payday or no payday.

Attorney General Murphy and Judge John P. McMahon, in effect, approved their "work on faith" policy with rulings that District employes may volunteer their services without involving the District in an illegal obligation.

Developments in the Capitol Hill fight that has tied up District funds for the last two weeks were:

Senate conferees met and decided that it would be futile to hold further conversations with House managers so long as the latter are bound by a House ultimatum.

President Roosevelt was preparing a special message to Congress for delivery either tomorrow or Monday.

The United States Engineer's Office, which has charge of the Capital's water supply, disclosed that the city is in danger of having its water cut off if funds are withheld much longer.

A test case to challenge the validity of arrests because of the peculiar extra-legal situation of the District was over-ruled in Traffic Court.

Committee Will Meet With Allen Today

Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, chairman of the House managers on the tax bill, said that the House conferees can still bargain with the Senate on the lump sum.

The bankers' committee, which will meet with Allen today at 10 a. m., includes Ord Preston, president of the District Bankers' Association; George M. Fisher, vice president and treasurer of the Washington Loan and Trust Co.; John Reilly, vice president of the Second National Bank, and Hilleary Hutchinson, vice president of Riggs National Bank.

Preston said last night the committee would approach the conference "with no definite plan" but "anxious to do anything possible to help our people."

Banks in the meantime would arrange loans with regular customers among District employes, he explained.

At the same time, officials of local utilities, loan banks and automobile finance companies said District employes will not be pressed for bills or notes now due. Penalties usually assessed delinquents, they added, will be overlooked when payment finally is made.

Action of the bankers first took form Tuesday, Preston said, when it appeared likely the local pay roll would not be met, with the House and Senate deadlocked on the supply bill.

The Attorney General confirmed the report from the White House that the President is "very anxious" over the District's fiscal plight at his press conference and at the same time backed up the President's instructions to the Commissioners to continue the city's function despite the deficiency act.

"I don't think any question ever could be raised as to the right to carry on such proper functions as police and fire protection," he said, in commenting on the question raised in Traffic Court.

Judge McMahon a short while previously had denied a motion of Attorney Leon M. Shinberg to dismiss a traffic charge against John Lee Hanaway, of 2548 Eighth street southeast, on the ground that District officers are operating illegally.

Judge McMahon, while overruling the motion, granted the lawyer an exception and continued the case until next week.

Shinberg contended that the arrest, prosecution and the trial were all illegal because of the deficiency act which prohibits the Government from accepting voluntary services and the failure of Congress to appropriate funds for the current fiscal year.

The prospect of the water supply of the National Capital being shut off was suggested by an aide in the United States Engineer's Office. He pointed out that the Federal Government cannot make contracts without an appropriation from Congress to fulfill them.

The division of the engineer's office which operates the city reservoirs is compelled to buy large supplies of chemicals frequently to treat the water, he said, and these are purchased by contract.

Although supplies were obtained this week, they were delivered without contract and merely on an understanding that the District government would pay for them.

Roosevelt Message May Spur Efforts

House conferees on both the tax and the supply bills, meanwhile, were frankly puzzled by the turn of events brought about by the adamant stand of the Senate managers, who announced they would take no further steps so long as the House conferees were bound to insist upon $5,000,000.

The Senate conferees, who previously had yielded on every point at issue except the lump sum and had met the House half way on that, stated that they had given in as far as they could. The next move, they intimated, is up to the House.

While both sides of the Capitol awaited expectantly for a message from President Roosevelt, there was considerable speculation as to whether he would defend either the Senate or the House, propose a compromise, or merely suggest that the legislative snarl be ended.

Such a message doubtlessly would spur the efforts of conferees to effect a reconciliation, but the temper of both legislative bodies has reached such a point that there is no assurance that a Presidential message will make either the House or the Senate yield.

Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, stated last night that there is no immediate prospect of ending the impasse that has tied up District funds for the last two weeks.

"We can do nothing so long as the hands of the House conferees are tied by instructions to insist upon $5,000,000," he said. "There can be no meeting of minds."

Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, chairman of the House managers on the tax bill, after being informed of the decision of the Senate conferees, stated that he did not consider the House conferees bound by the instructions.

Although he himself offered the motion to instruct, Nichols said:

"Why it's silly to say that we can't bring back any sort of proposition we want to. The House instruction to insist doesn't keep us from bargaining."

Chairman Collins of the House sub-committee on District appro-

History Behind D. C. Fund Jam

TWICE BEFORE in the last quarter century has Congress failed to pass a District appropriation bill before the end of the fiscal year, but never before has the District been left to battle its way through a payless payday.

IN 1916, no appropriation bill was passed until September. Congress, however, adopted a continuing resolution permitting the Commissioners to borrow from the Federal Government for pay rolls and other expenses.

AGAIN, IN 1931, passage of the District appropriation bill was delayed until July 3. It was then made retroactive to July 1, legalizing all expenditures during the fundless two days.

Board to Act On Playground Offer of WPA

Problem of Keeping Children Off Streets To Be Studied Today

The Commissioners and the Board of Education will meet at 10 a. m. today for a final drafting of plans to take Washington's vacationing children off the streets by providing additional city-wide recreational facilities.

Three members of the Board of Education, together with the three Commissioners, comprise the new playground commission, created earlier in the week to meet the growing problem of protecting youngsters from the perils of traffic during the remainder of the summer.

At today's meeting will be Mrs. Hen. Grattan Doyle, president of the school board; C. Melvin Sharpe and John Wilson, board members; Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, and Lewis R. Barrett, District co-ordinator of recreation.

It is expected the new commission will vote to accept the offer of Ross Haworth, administrative assistant of WPA, to provide 50 additional playground supervisors to take over school playgrounds closed since beginning of the school vacation period.

Under an expanded recreational program for Washington, the budget bureau recently approved an increased allotment for employment of more play supervisors. They will be used to augment the force of 150 playground directors now at work and their assignments will permit opening of all "suitable" play centers in the city, it was announced.

Roosevelt Denies Hull Fight Story

President Criticizes United Press for 'Not True Dispatch'

By the United Press.

A United Press dispatch that President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull had disagreed on the language of a neutrality message to Congress drew a sharp denial yesterday from the President.

The dispatch said a report of a disagreement between Secretary Hull and Mr. Roosevelt had come from Administration quarters—that the President wanted to use forceful language in stating his position on neutrality, but that Hull was represented as opposed to language so forceful that it might anger the Rome-Berlin axis and further antagonize a rebellious Senate.

The President's statement said:

"The reading public is entitled to a statement from the President, a statement of warning which has been made necessary by a news story issued through the United Press today and already printed in one or more papers and on the United Press ticker service.

"The headline of the local Washington Times-Herald states that the President and the Secretary of State have 'split' on some form of note on neutrality.

"The story states that they 'were reported in Administration quarters today to have disagreed on the language of a neutrality message.'

False, Says Roosevelt

"The headline is, of course, wholly false; so is the story.

"The subterfuge of saying in the lead of the story that they were 'reported' to have disagreed is obvious, because it is a practice too often engaged in to invent such 'reports' out of a clear blue sky, failing wholly to check up with any responsible source in Washington.

"The United Press has been guilty of a falsification of the actual facts. If called upon to give the source of the information, they will decline to give it—another usual subterfuge.

"The fact remains that the story is contrary to every fact.

"I am calling this to the attention of the public because it represents a culmination of other false news stories to which the attention of the United Press has been called by me and by my office on previous occasions.

"It is, of course, impossible for the White House to deny every false story. This latest episode, however, represents the limit of any decent person's patience, and I am giving this in the form of a statement relating specifically to the United Press because I do not wish it to be considered as an indictment of the newspapers of the United States or other press associations.

"The fact of this particular case is that the press has been informed continuously for the past 36 hours that the President and the Secretary of State have not decided, up to the present time, whether he will address any message to the Congress or what the next step of the Administration on neutrality will be. That is the truth, and it is a great pity that this simple truth of which the press has been informed has been disregarded by a press association."

The story which Mr. Roosevelt denied was prepared by Ronald G. Van Tine, head of the United Press Senate staff, and Grattan P. McGroarty, who covers the State Department. It carried Van Tine's signature.

"I wrote the dispatch," Van Tine said. "Some of the information was my own and some of it came from my colleague, McGroarty. It was based on information obtained from Government sources."

Lyle C. Wilson, manager of the Washington bureau of the United Press, said:

Reliable Reporters

"The men who collaborated on that story are reliable, experienced reporters. I have discussed the story with them and believe that they faithfully reported the information they obtained in the normal process of their daily assignments."

Wilson said he had been told the President desired to see him at the White House and that he had been called before the President once before, on June 20, and criticized for a dispatch which he had written.

Father Divine, who yesterday inspected the lavish Goelet estate, known as Glenmere, is "considering" acquisition of the property, Maj. Harlo Fisk, superintendent of the estate, announced today.

The Gallup Poll

Pennsylvania Favors Leading Republican At Present, Special Survey Shows

By Dr. George Gallup

Director American Institute of Public Opinion

New York, July 13.—Pennsylvania, which went Democratic in 1936 but elected a Republican governor last autumn, continues to lean toward the Republican side, judging by surveys of political sentiment conducted throughout the State by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

GEORGE GALLUP

Whereas President Roosevelt carried the State by 38 per cent in 1936, a majority of Pennsylvania voters now say they would like to see the Republican party, rather than the Democrats, win the Presidential election of 1940. The division of strength between the Republicans and Democrats is sufficiently close at this time, however, to indicate that Pennsylvania, with its 36 electoral votes, is likely to be one of the chief battlegrounds in the campaign next year.

Using methods which have proved accurate in two national elections and more than 50 state and local elections, the survey explored the sentiments of a cross-section of Pennsylvania voters on their party preference today, the third term, and candidates for 1940.

The trend toward Republicanism is indicated in the answers to the question: "Which party would you like to see win the Presidential election in 1940?"

Would like Democrats to win	46%
Would like Republicans to win	54%

This division of sentiment is exactly the same as the vote cast in the gubernatorial election last autumn, in which the Republican, Arthur James, polled 54 per cent against 46 per cent for the Democratic candidate.

Party defection is approximately five times as great among Democratic voters as among Republicans. Thus, while only one Republican voter in every 20 says he would like to see the Democrats win in 1940, one Democratic voter in every four at the present time says he would like to see the Republicans win.

A third term for President Roosevelt is not popular with a majority of Pennsylvania voters. In answer to the general question whether they would vote for Roosevelt for a third term if he ran, 46 per cent replied "yes," 54 per cent "no."

If Roosevelt did run for a third term, and the Republicans put up Thomas E. Dewey of New York to run against him, a majority of Pennsylvania voters say at the present time that they would vote for Dewey. The actual vote is:

Dewey	55%
Roosevelt	45

Dewey's lead is accounted for chiefly by the fact that nearly a third of the Democrats say they would rather switch parties and vote for the young Republican racket-buster than vote for a Roosevelt third term.

In case Roosevelt decides not to run in 1940, Vice-President Garner would be the leading choice of Pennsylvania Democrats, with James A. Farley second, and Cordell Hull third. However, more than half the Democratic voters in the State say they are undecided about their choice at the present time.

The leading choices of thise with opinions are:

Democrats	If F. D. R. Doesn't Run Per Cent Favoring
John N. Garner	60%
James A. Farley	12
Cordell Hull	9
Frank Murphy	4
Harry L. Hopkins	4
Ex-Gov. George Earle	2
Sen. Joseph Guffey	2
Joseph P. Kennedy	2
Herbert H. Lehman	1
Others	4

Among the others mentioned are Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas, Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson, Paul V. McNutt, Ambassador William Bullitt, a native of Philadelphia, and Harold L. Ickes.

Among Republican voters throughout Pennsylvania, Thomas E. Dewey is at present the favorite choice for the presidency in 1940, with Senator Robert Taft second, and Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg third. Dewey, who received 54 per cent of the Republican preference vote in a recent Institute survey of the Nation as a whole, polls 53 per cent in Pennsylvania.

Leading Republican choices in the Pennsylvania survey are:

Republicans	Percent Favoring
Thomas E. Dewey	53%
Robert H. Taft	16
Arthur H. Vandenberg	14
Gov. Arthur Jones	5
Herbert Hoover	4
Alfred Landon	3
William E. Borah	2

Others mentioned included Bruce Barton, Henry Ford, Fiorello LaGuardia, and Glenn Frank.

Roosevelt Aid To Be Asked For PWA Fund

10 in House Plan To Urge $500,000,000 Be Put in Budget

A Congressional drive to obtain $500,000,000 for the PWA will open today with a direct appeal to President Roosevelt by ten members of the House.

Headed by Representative Starnes (Democrat), of Alabama, the delegation will ask the President to add the PWA provision to the 1940 budget estimates. Failure of the budget to include any grant for PWA has balked previous efforts of the PWA Congressional bloc to obtain an appropriation.

The $500,000,000—$400,000,000 for non-Federal and $100,000,000 for Federal projects—will take care of all projects which local governing bodies have already approved, it was said.

Dempsey in Group

Representative Dempsey (Democrat), of New Mexico, one of the members of the delegation, asserted yesterday the President's proposed self-liquidating loan program for public works would not make up for adoblition of the PWA system of Federal grants.

Besides Starnes and Dempsey, the following Democrats were reported planning to join in the appeal: Thomason, of Texas; Leavey, of Washington; T. F. Ford, of California; Beam, of Illinois; Dingell, of Michigan; Delaney, of New York; McCormack, of Massachusetts, and Boland, of Pennsylvania, the majority whip.

On the other side of the Capitol, Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, said he intends to offer a proposal that $100,000,000 be granted by the Government for a Nation-wide school construction program.

Landing Program Urged

Representative Steagall, of Alabama, chairman of the committee, and Representative Williams, of Missouri, next ranking Democratic member, paid an early-morning visit to the White House, where it was reported, they were urged by President Roosevelt to help pass the lending program at this session.

A proposal to increase the lending capacity of the United States Housing Authority by $800,000,000, embodied in separate legislation but part of the general lending program, has been before the committee for several weeks. It may come to a vote today. Hearings on the rest of the program will be concluded before the end of next week, Steagall said.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace told the House committee yesterday that 4,000,000 people living on farms were receiving less for their labor than were many non-workers on home relief. The farm residents, with annual family incomes of less than $250, are "trying to exist" on incomes of $1 a week per person, said Wallace.

At Senate hearings on the loan program, Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the Public Roads Bureau, said that tolls alone could not pay for the proposed "self-liquidating" roads, but the Government would be able to finance them by purchasing land along the right-of-way, and then reselling it at a much higher price after the new road has raised land values.

John M. Carmody, new Federal Works Administrator, cited the work of the Rural Electrification Administration as an example of self-liquidating projects.

Hoover Suggests Engineers Aid Idle

San Francisco, July 13 (AP).—Former President Herbert Hoover suggested today that the engineers of the Nation might succeed where economists, politicians and sociologists have failed in finding a solution to the unemployment problem.

Hoover, himself a mining engineer, was guest of honor at "Engineers' Day" at the Golden Gate International Exposition.

In an address he declared the problem of employing America's 11,000,000 jobless is a "vital emergency job for the objective minds of the engineers."

On Capitol Hill

To clarify the exemption of several thousand county weekly and semiweekly newspapers from the wage-hour act, Administrator Elmer F. Andrews yesterday drew a distinction between bona fide newspapers and commercial printing establishments.

ANDREWS

In a letter to William L. Daley, of the National Editorial Association, he wrote that workers "employed in connection with the publication" of such papers are exempt "even though they work on job printing" while not engaged in publishing the paper. He said that "while we feel confident that the courts will limit this exemption to employes whose primary work is the printing and publication" of such papers, "we cannot undertake to determine at this time the factors which the courts will consider in determining the primary work of the employe."

He noted that the exemption "is limited to employes of a newspaper publisher and does not apply to the employes of a pdinter who merely prints a newspaper for the publisher."

Members of Congress had voiced fears that many small newspapers which must depend on job printing for part of their revenue would be hard hit.

The Senate late yesterday confirmed the reappointment of Aubrey W. Williams, of Wisconsin, as National Youth Administrator, and the nomination of Benjamin J. McKinney as United States marshal for the District of Arizona.

The Supreme Court disposed of 371 of the 922 cases on the appellate docket at the October term of court just concluded, Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson reported yesterday.

Of 89 Government cases decided, Jackson said, the Government won 57 and lost 32. Among the most important cases decided in favor of the Government were one upholding the right of States to tax the salaries of Federal employes, and one sustaining provisions of the agricultural marketing agreement act.

President Roosevelt asked Congress to provide an additional $210,000 for the Federal Communications Commission to be used to establish "more adequate regulation" of the telephone industry. The money, the President explained in a budget estimate, would be employed in utilizing data gathered in the long investigation of the telephone industry.

The Senate passed and sent to the White House a bill by Representative Boren (Democrat), of Oklahoma, ratifying continuation of an oil States' compact for two years. The participating States are Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas, New Mexico, Michigan and Colorado.

Murphy Rushes Rogge to Help in L. S. U. Inquiry

By the United Press.

Attorney General Frank Murphy announced yesterday he has sent O. John Rogge, chief of the Justice Department's criminal division, to Louisiana to assist in investigation of embezzlement charges against Dr. James Monroe Smith, who resigned recently as president of Louisiana State University.

Experts on income taxes, postoffice regulations and oil already are in New Orleans, where Smith, who is charged with embezzling $100,000, although his alleged defalcations have been estimated several times larger, is undergoing investigation.

Murphy, expressing the "greatest confidence" in United States District Attorney Viosca, who has been presenting the Smith case to a grand jury, said he intends "to make the most thorough and elaborate effort to determine whether there have been any violations of Federal laws."

Ranger Fire Loss Placed at $3,000

Norfolk, Va., July 13 (AP).—Navy Yard officials today lifted the ban of secrecy surrounding the fire aboard the aircraft carrier Ranger Wednesday and from Rear Admiral Manley H. Simons, U. S. N. commandant of the yard, came the announcement that "$3,000 will cover the damage to the vessel."

Although the board of inquiry is closed to the public, Admiral Simons said that since a "welder" was exonerated it was probable that someone dropped a cigarette in the gasoline. "Just who did this probably will never be known," he added.

Rowe Is First In New Job as Roosevelt Aide

McReynolds, Currie Expected to Take Oath in a Few Days

James Henry Rowe, jr., 30-year-old attorney, yesterday became the first of President Roosevelt's three new administrative assistants to assume his job—and the $10,000-a-year salary that goes with it.

William H. McReynolds and Lauchlin Currie, the other two, received their commissions from the President, but have not yet taken the oath of office.

Rowe, who has been serving as assistant to Brig. Gen. Edwin M. Watson, one of the President's secretaries, took the oath from a notary public.

The three men, chosen because they have a "passion for anonymity," as well as hard work, will have offices in the State Department. Budget Director Harold D. Smith also will be there.

McReynolds, who has been an administrative assistant to Secretary Morgenthau, will take the oath within the next few days. Currie, for several years an assistant research director of the Federal Reserve Board, probably will assume his duties Monday.

Meanwhile, it appeared the President might not name the remaining threee assistants for some time, if at all. Belief is that he has not clearly made up his mind as to what their duties would be.

The White House said the new positions would not outrank that of secretary to the President, as had been suggested in some Administration quarters. The President's three secretaries, therefore, are expected to keep their present jobs instead of being named as the remaining three assistants.

The assistants will be on special assignments, dealing with legal, economic and reorganization questions.

Inquiry Begins Into WPA Strike

WPA employes had been dismissed for remaining away from work five consecutive days. Col. F. C. Harrington, Works Projects Commissioner, served notice at a conference of State WPA directors in Chicago that such discharges would continue.

In Washington, the American Federation of Labor placed before President Roosevelt its request for restoration of the old WPA rule that workers receive the prevailing local wage for their type of work.

Dan Tracy, head of the A. F. L.'s Electrical Workers Union, called upon Mr. Roosevelt. He told reporters afterward that "anything on the WPA situation will have to come from the President." Mr. Roosevelt had said previously at a press conference that he thought the Administration would stick with the new relief act's requirement that WPA employes work 130 hours for a monthly "security wage."

The A. F. L. said it had made a date at the White House for President William Green and a committee to see Mr. Roosevelt today to discuss not only WPA wages, but urgent demands from A. F. L. theatrical unions for the revival of the WPA Federal Theater project.

Only a short time after Tracy's visit to the White House, Col. Harrington declared at a press conference in Chicago that he had no intention of asking Congress "for legislation at this time" to alter the new relief statute.

"Loud Howl" Forecast

Harrington said the conference of WPA directors decided to start putting into effect immediately the law's requirement that, effective September 1, employes who have been on the rolls 18 months or more be laid off for 30 days. If the furloughs were delayed to September 1, he said, projects would collapse because of the absence of so many men at the same time.

The commissioner predicted, in response to a question, that there would be a "loud howl" when the WPA readjusts geographical differentials in monthly work relief wages, as the new act directs. He had explained previously that wages in the North and West would be reduced September 1, while those in the South would be increased. The law provides that differences in WPA rates in various sections shall be no greater than differences in the cost of living, but that the present national average—$52.50 a month—shall not be changed.

Corrington Gill, acting WPA commissioner in Harrington's absence from the National Capital, announced that he had asked the Department of Justice to determine whether penal provisions of the new law had been violated at East St. Louis.

The law provides fines of not more than $1,000, imprisonment of not more than two years, or both, for persons using threats, intimidation or force to deprive anyone of benefits to which he is entitled under the relief appropriation.

Soviet Accused Of Subverting U. S. Forces

Bridges Witness Says Moscow Ordered Clubs Formed in Services

San Francisco, July 13 (AP).—New Communist techniques of infiltration in the United States Army and Navy, and State Militias were described by a Government witness in the Harry Bridges deportation case today, in testimony in which the word "murder" was linked with the party.

The witness, John L. Leech, former party organizer in Los Angeles, said that on orders from Russia the party had abandoned its efforts to create "communist cells" in battleships and troops, and had organized "social clubs" for soldiers where Communists could mingle with them.

Leech, a house painter, said that as a party official he had "assigned 500 to 600 members of the Young Communists' League or of the Communist Party to become members of the National Guard in California."

A. F. of L. Sues Bridges

Sending members into the Army was abandoned, he said, because of possible international friction between Russia and the United States. Communists no longer join the militia, he added, because they might have to oppose the workers on strike duty.

Bridges, West Coast C. I. O. director and maritime leader, was served with a complaint naming him co-defendant with John L. Lewis and a publication, the Timber Worker, in a $100,000 libel suit filed by the Oregon-Washington Council of the Lumber and Sawmill Workers of American, A. F. L.

The complaint charged that writings in the Timber Worker, organ of C. I. O. lumber workers, had defamed the A. F. L. group.

Leech, who has repudiated an earlier statement declaring Bridges was not a Communist, said he only signed that statement at the behest of Communist Party members because he feared physical violence and other reprisals if he refused.

He said he "knew definitely" of men having been assigned to "beat-up squads," and personally knew that the Communist Party had "participated in cases where murder has been committed."

Dean James M. Landis, presiding officer at the four-day-old hearing, approved issuance of a subpena for Stanley Morton Doyle, who, the defense charged, was the "mainspring" of an employer conspiracy to get Bridges deported to his native Australia. Doyle, former national commander of the 40 et 8 society of the American Legion, was reported to be in Minneapolis yesterday.

Housing Costs Can Be Halved, Says Expert

Monopoly Committee Told Outmoded Codes Add to Expenses

By the Associated Press.

A housing research worker told the Monopoly Committee today that an adequate research program sponsored by the Government could halve housing costs in two years.

The assertion was made by Robert L. Davison, director of housing research for the John B. Pierce Foundation, New York.

Displaying samples of new types of building materials which he said could be adapted to housing construction, Davison said limited private research had demonstrated the possibility of cutting building costs.

"We could have just as livable or more livable housing at half the cost within two years," he said.

Outmoded local building codes and reluctance of the building materials industry to displace its present products were mentioned by the witness as among reasons why a dozen available new materials were not being generally used.

Meanwhile, Attorney General Murphy declared the Justice Department's drive against alleged monopolistic practices in the building industry probably would get under way in September.

At his press conference, the Attorney General said the building industry in some cities is a "racketeering proposition."

"We want to free the industry," he said.

Stating that costs were "way up" in New Jersey, Murphy said the cost differences between that State and New York could not be explained except in terms of artificial combination.

He said no isolated indictments would be sought, but it is the intention of the antitrust division to move against all participating in keeping prices artificially high.

Milk Industry Antitrust Suit Dismissed

Farm Marketing Held Outside Jurisdiction Of Sherman Act

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 13.—The Government's campaign against alleged monopolies suffered a setback today when its anti-trust case against 57 individuals, corporations and organizations in the milk industry was dismissed in Federal Court.

Judge Charles E. Woodward, in sustaining defense demurrers to an indictment accusing the defendants of conspiracy to fix milk prices, control the supply and suppress competition in the huge Chicago area, ruled Congress had removed the marketing of farm products from the jurisdiction of the Sherman anti-trust law and had placed control in the hands of the Secretary of Agriculture.

U. S. Plans Appeal

After a telephone conversation with officials of the Department of Justice in Washington, Leo F. Tierney, special assistant Attorney General, announced steps would be taken to appeal the decision to the United States Supreme Court.

"If this is the law," he commented, "complete jurisdiction over all agricultural commodities is transferred to the Secretary of Agriculture and the Sherman act is dead so far as agricultural commodities are concerned."

Judge Woodward's action thrust upon Government chieftains the problem of future policy both in the regulation of farm markets and the drive against alleged monopolies.

Removed From Trade Sphere

"The production and marketing of agricultural products, including milk, has, so far as interstate commerce is concerned, been removed from the sphere of trade and barter in a free agency to a status of dependence and obedience to the supreme, exclusive and plenary control of the Secretary of Agriculture, subject to judicial review in the mode prescribed by the statutes," the jurist opined.

"The court holds that, by the agricultural marketing agreement act, the Congress has comitted to the executive department, acting through the Secretary of Agriculture, full power over the production and marketing, in interstate commerce, of agricultural products, including milk. The marketing of agricultural products, including milk, covered by the agricultural market agreement act, is removed from the purview of the Sherman act."

He stated that the Secretary of Agriculture was empowered to control the industry in any milk shed and it was his duty to intervene if the act was violated.

Defendants Dismissed

Among those named—and dismissed today—were: The Borden Co., New York; Borden-Wieland, Inc., New York; Bowman Dairy Co., Chicago; D. B. Peck, Chicago, president of the Bowman Dairy; H. W. Comfort, New York, vice president of the Borden Co.; S. M. Ross, Columbus, Ohio, midwest district chairman of the Borden Co.; C. L. Dressel, Chicago, president of the Borden-Wieland division of the Borden Co.

Daniel Gilbert, chief investigator of the Cook County (Chicago) State's Attorney's office; the Milk Wagon Drivers Union and seven of its officers; Leslie Goudie, president of the International Brotherhood of Teamster's Chicago Local; Leland Spencer, Ithaca, N. Hanes to Quit Treasury Oct. 1, Friends Say

Morgenthau Regrets Decision; Piloted Revenue Act in Congress

By Cecil B. Dickson.

International News Service Staff Writer.

Undersecretary of the Treasury John W. Hanes, the New York businessman who piloted through Congress the new revenue act repealing the New Deal's undistributed profits levy, has notified friends he will resign, effective October 1.

The disclosure was made yesterday by Hanes' friends on Capitol Hill, where he has appeared before the House Ways and Means and Senate Finance Committees on tax problems as they affect business and the national economy.

At present Hanes is on his vacation at Fishers Island in Long Island Sound. He will return in August to permit Morgenthau to take an extended vacation with his family in Norway, Sweden and possibly Finland.

Resignation Regretted

At the Treasury, officials said Morgenthau regretted Hanes' decision to leave, but realized the Undersecretary felt it was imperative upon him to return to Wall Street to attend to his widespread business interests.

Hanes was drafted into the SEC by the then chairman, Joseph P. Kennedy, now American Ambassador to England, and, after Kennedy left, almost single-handedly negotiated peace between the Government and the New York Stock Exchange.

It was this accomplishment by Hanes that prompted Morgenthau to seek his services as his chief aid. Morgenthau placed Hanes in charge of Treasury tax studies that resulted in the new act eliminating the undistributed profits and other "business deterrent" levies.

Only this week, Hanes broke into his vacation to return for a brief appearance before the Ways and Means Committee to refute testimony of Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, of New York, on the Administration's plan to eliminate future Federal, State and municipal tax-exempt securities.

To Prepare Oath

Decision of the committee to drop consideration of the proposal at this session was said to have prompted Hanes to decide definitely to resign. However, he will continue his work of preparing data for a study to be made by a taxation sub-committee headed by Representative Cooper (Democrat), of Tennessee, which is scheduled to open hearings in the fall.

Hanes' departure will bring to four the number of Undersecretaries of the Treasury who have left since the advent of the New Deal. The others were Roswell Magill, Columbia University professor; Dean Acheson, Washington attorney, and Thomas Jefferson Coolidge, Boston banker.

In addition, a number of Assistant Secretaries have departed, including Wayne Chatfield Taylor, of Chicago; L. W. (Chip) Robert, of Atlanta; Thomas Hewes and Miss Josephine Roche.

Acheson, Coolidge, Taylor, Hewes and Robert all left after differences of opinion developed on fiscal policies adopted by the New Deal.

Wagner Health Bill Not to Be Acted Upon

The public health program sponsored by Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, apparently will not be acted upon before next session of Congress. A Senate subcommittee held final hearings yesterday, but Senator Murray (Democrat), of Montana, said the committee would not pass upon the legislation this session.

Blood in Torso Case Turns Out To Be Plain Dirt

Cleveland, July 13 (U.P.).—The case against Frank Dolezal, who confessed to one of the 13 beheadings attributed to the "mad butcher of Kingsbury Run," appeared weakened tonight by a scientific test that had been intended to clinch it.

Sheriff Martin L. O'Donnell announced that scrapings taken from the "murder laboratory" in Dolezal's quarters failed to reveal blood of any sort. Previously he had said he wanted Dr. Enrique Ecker, of Western Reserve University, to "verify" earlier tests that showed human blood.

"The tests I made on six samples that I obtained myself were negative," Dr. Ecker said. "They were just plain dirt."

Brush Fire Perils Timber at Waldorf

A brush fire, started yesterday when Thomas Middleton, farm implement dealer, attempted to clear land adjacent to his new home site three miles south of Waldorf, Md., was fanned into a roaring blaze by a sudden gust of wind. The flames threatened to wipe out several acres of timber land before they were brought under control.

Columns of black smoke were seen for miles and brought scores of motorists to the scene on the Waldorf-Bryantown pike. Middleton and several volunteer helpers finally gained control of the blaze but not before it had laid waste nearly an acre of pine trees.

Progress Reported In Parley to End G. M. Auto Strike

Detroit, July 13 (AP).—Negotiations seeking settlement of the General Motors strike carried over into a night session tonight as corporation officials and representatives of the C. I. O.-United Automobile Workers agreed the conference was "progressing nicely."

The eight-day old strike of 6,700 skilled G. M. workers has affected 11 plants in Detroit, Cleveland, Pontiac and Saginaw.

State police prepared to withdraw from Pontiac, scene of disorders this week between U. A. W.-C. I. O. pickets and Pontiac police.

UNTIL NOW—you have been unable to enjoy in your Bottled in Bond purchases the Schenley policy of pricing the finest quality of every whiskey we distill as close as possible to actual manufacturing costs.

Why we have been without the necessary supply until now

On April 28th, 1934, our huge warehouse at Lexington, Kentucky, burned to the ground. Priceless Bottled in Bond Bourbon was utterly destroyed.

Time was needed to make up this loss. It has delayed until now our first big-scale entry into the Bottled in Bond market.

Now you get the benefits of Schenley's policy in this new field. For, at this sensational low price you can now buy a Bottled in Bond straight Bourbon whiskey which has an outstanding rating.

We have had the courage—and the faith in America's appreciation of fair values—to make the investment necessary. And because we have built up this supply of choice whiskey and held it in reserve, you are assured of constant quality in every bottle of Old Schenley you buy.

Made from choice American grains, copper distilled under the rigid regulations of the Schenley Quality Control Board . . . aged in specially selected and rigidly tested white oak casks . . . in air-conditioned warehouses . . . and brought direct from the warehouse to you in bottles bearing the familiar green strip stamp. Old Schenley is full 100 proof. This whiskey is 4 years old. Your assurance of quality is...the Schenley Mark of Merit.

The Schenley Creed

1 To buy only the choicest materials and to employ only the most skilled and experienced craftsmen.

2 To price our goods to distributors as close as possible to actual manufacturing costs.

3 To make our products entirely of American grains, with American labor and under a true American system of high quality, low prices, and fair profits.

A good reputation is the one thing in life worth building

U. S. Must Go Its 'Own Way,' Lothian Says

Britain Warned by Her Future Envoy Our Ideas Are Independent

Special Dispatch to The Post

London, July 13.—In one of the frankest analyses of Anglo-American relations that has yet been made by an influential Briton, the Marquis of Lothian, the British Ambassador designate to Washington, in a speech tonight advised Great Britain and the United States as nations with "an undoubted underlying unity" but unsuspected differences, each "to go our own way humbly, exchanging counsel as and when we may," in facing the dictatorships' challenge "to our deepest instincts and convictions."

Thus he predicted Britain and America, "which with France have done more for human freedom than any others, will find the way whereby war can be ended on earth and individual and national liberty preserved."

With his speech approved in advance by Prime Minister Chamberlain, Lord Lothian addressed the Pilgrims Society at a farewell dinner in his honor at the Hotel Victoria before he sails late next month or early in the fall to Washington.

Lloyd George Pays Tribute

David Lloyd George, Britain's World War prime minister, also spoke, paying tribute at first to Lord Lothian, who as plain Philip Kerr was his war-time private secertary, and to his appointment "to the greatest democratic country which the world has ever seen."

Then this "elder statesman" went ton to warn the democracies that they are facing "the most formidable challenge and are sustaining the worst set-back which they have ever encountered."

Other speakers included American Ambassador Kennedy and the Earl of Derby, who presided.

In his speech, Lord Lothian, by inference, advised wishful thinkers and advocates of an Anglo-American alliance "to concede to the United States just the same freedom and independence as we claim for ourselves."

Could U. S. "Stay Out?"

"The most common British misinterpretation of the United States lies in the field of external policy," he declared. "My own impression is that it is a profound mistake to think that the United States is not interested in international affairs today...

"My impression, from talking to all sorts of people was that public opinion in the United States has become more and more alarmed—an impression confirmed by the Gallup and Fortune polls—that if a new world war breaks out it will be extremely difficult for her, however hard she may try, to keep out indefinitely if she is to protect her own vital interests."

He said the United States was "thinking and thinking deeply about the future" and "is as concerned as anybody else that a way should be found of preventing these steadily recurring cataclysms from descending again and again to engulf mankind in violence, hatred and ruin."

U. S. to "Think for Itself"

"It is essential," he continued, "that we should realize that the United States is going to think out these ultimate problems for itself and by itself, and that it is going to reach somewhat different conclusions from ourselves...

"I have no idea what conclusion the United States will ultimately reach, but it is to me inconceivable that a great nation which has worked so relentlessly and so successfully for the extension of human freedom, which is so independent-minded, which has successfully constructed the first democratic and federal constitution ever known to man, which fought a civil war under the greatest democratic leader the world has seen, Abraham Lincoln, to expel slavery and maintain unity, which intervened decisively in the last great struggle for human freedom 25 years ago, should not have a contribution of its own and a vital contribution to the solution of these vast problems."

Britain's Purpose "Clear"

As for Britain, he said, this country "has once more found itself and a clear purpose" and has made up its mind that there can be no future for civilization unless two at least of "its basic achievements are preserved—individual freedom and national freedom."

"Everything else," he said significantly and again with official blessing, "is open to discussion. There are admittedly vast and difficult problems affecting both politics and economics, access to markets and raw materials, security for a rising standard of living for all people, the ending of anarchy and war, which can only be fruitfully solved by honest and frank discussions between nations."

Mongols Claim 199 Japanese Planes Downed

2,000 Manchukuan Troops Reported Killed, Guns, Tanks Seized

By the United Press.

Moscow, July 13.—Russo-Mongol forces fighting Japan's Kwantung army on the border between Russia's Outer Mongolian protectorate and Manchukuo have shot down 199 Japanese planes, killed thousands of Japanese and Manchukuan soldiers and captured Japanese tanks, armored cars and guns, the Tass News Agency reported tonight.

(Both Russia and Japan have been claiming "overwhelming victories" in intermittent border fighting which has been under way since May 12. The Japanese claim to have shot down more than 600 Soviet planes.)

The Tass statement, based on "information from Soviet-Mongolian headquarters," said that between July 6 and 12 the Manchu-Japanese forces lost about 2,000 killed and more than 3,500 wounded. In the same period the Soviet forces captured 254 prisoners, four guns, four tanks, 15 armored cars, 70 machine guns and other weapons.

"In the period from May 28 to July 12 a total of 199 Japanese planes were brought down," Tass said.

Soviet forces lost 52 planes in the same period, it was said.

The statement said the Soviet forces in fighting between July 6 and 12 in the area of Noman Kan Burd Obo and the River Khalkingol (Khalka) drove Manchu-Japanese units from Outer Mongol territory.

At Dawnon July 8, the statement said, the Manchu-Japanese were reinforced with infantry, tanks, heavy artillery and aviation and again assumed the offensive.

From July 8 to 12 there was heavy fighting including hand-to-hand battles but the Japanese attack was repulsed with the aid of additional Soviet planes and the territory east of the Khalka River was regained by Soviet troops.

The statement said Japanese units engaged included two infantry divisions (about 40,000 men at war strength)—the Seventh and Twenty-third—the first motorized brigade, about 100 tanks, the first independent regiment of heavy field artillery and about six or seven Japanese and Manchu cavalry regiments.

Soviet losses in these battles were 293 killed and 653 wounded.

Japanese Hint Boycott if U. S. Votes Embargo

By International News Service

Tokyo, July 13.—The threat of a rupture in trade relations between Japan and the United States was held forth today by a high-placed Japanese source as prospective retaliation should the American Congress adopt the Pittman resolution.

The resolution would embargo American shipments of essential war materials to Japan.

A Japanese observer, apparently close to the government, was quoted by the Domei News Agency as declaring:

"Economic provocation, such as is being planned by Senator Key Pittman would only serve to lead to retaliation and eventually the suspension of trade relations between Japan and the United States, thus needlessly aggravating the relations between the two countries."

Japanese imports of American raw cotton were estimated to total $252,000,000 annually and all Japanese purchases of American materials were estimated at $800,000,000 a year.

The spokesman contended that Japan would not be deterred from carving out her "new order" in China, because Japanese industry is approaching the stage of self-sufficiency.

Even the stoppage of American oil and gasoline shipments, he added, would not stop Japan, "so long as Japan secures command of the sea in the western Pacific." This was interpreted as meaning that the Japanese could obtain oil and gasoline from the Dutch East Indies.

The Japanese cabinet, meanwhile, held an emergency meeting, at which it was decided to present a firm front to Britain in the impending Anglo-Japanese conference for settlement of the Tientsin blockade problem. The conference may start tomorrow, it was indicated.

The cabinet approved the serving of a demand upon the British that they "abandon their pro-Chiang Kai-shek tendencies" and "co-operate politically and economically" with Japan throughout North China.

That the conference will be launched in an atmosphere uncomfortable to Britain was obvious from the fact that posters appeared on the streets of Tokyo, reading:

"Punch England in the Nose."

"Down With England."

"England, the Arch-Devil Behind Chiang Kai-shek."

Britain Plans Conscription In Hong Kong

Reversal of Policy Seen in Move to Defend Colony

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Friday), July 14.—The government of Britain's South China colony in Hongkong today prepared orders to conscript all able-bodied British subjects in the crown colony and the adjacent Kowloon leased territory for military duty effective July 20.

It was understood the colonial governor has approved the conscription bill which may be published tomorrow. The measure already has been approved by the colonial office in London and the home government.

The Hongkong defense force will be organized along the lines of Britain's home "territorials." Its organization means that Britain fears a Japanese attack on the crown colony and is prepared to resist despite Japan's overwhelming military superiority in the South China area.

Reason for the sudden measure was said to be the adamant attitude assumed by Japan in her preparations for the impending Anglo-Japanese conversations in Tokyo.

Britain believes Japan will present her with impossible proposals and that when they are rejected the Japanese armed forces in China may begin an immediate attack on British areas, including Hongkong and the British concession in Tientsin.

(In London persons close to the colonial office said the conscription decision in Hongkong reverses a view long held that Hongkong could not be defended against Japan.)

In Tokyo, the Japanese cabinet met in emergency session and approved a report by Foreign Minister Arita outlining the policies on which the Army and foreign office have agreed relative to the forthcoming Anglo-Japanese conversations.

The Domei News Agency said the program includes:

Japan will insist that Britain cease supporting Chinese Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, change her "anti-Japanese attitude in China," and recognize the new situation created in north China by Japan's conquests.

Britain must agree to co-operate with Japan politically and economically in the Tientsin area and to help maintain peace.

Isolationists To Fight Ban On Japan Trade

Senate Bloc Fears Neutrality Rider May Be Offered

Isolationist Senators who forced committee postponement of the Administration's neutrality proposals, yesterday turned their fire on legislation to embargo trade with Japan.

The Japanese embargo issue, scheduled for action by the Foreign Relations Committee today, temporarily overshadowed the neutrality fight as leaders awaited the next White House move.

Tentative decision to oppose the proposed embargo on Nine-Power Treaty violators was reached at a morning conference of isolationist bloc strategists, some of whose members had previously favored the Japanese ban.

Their action was based partly on fear of a possible Administration effort to offer the neutrality bill as a rider, and in part on contentions an embargo on shipments to Japan would violate this country's 1911 amity and commerce treaty with Tokyo.

Whether the opposition bloc will maintain a united front if the issue goes to a committee vote was open to question. Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, and others, said they wished to study the question further.

Conferring were Senators Clark (Democrat), of Missouri; Borah, Johnson, of California, Nye, North Dakota, and Vandenberg, of Michigan (Republicans), and La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin—all members of the strategy group opposing neutrality bill action.

They are expected to ask that the State Department "officially" commit itself on the trade proposal before the committee acts.

Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, who joined with this group to cast the deciding vote in favor of postponing neutrality action, indicated last night he is inclined toward the proposed embargo.

Chairman Pittman, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, author of one of the two pending Japanese embargo bills, gave personal assurance he would oppose any effort to attach the neutrality measure to his bill if it reaches the floor.

Isolationist members took the position Pittman's assurances were not sufficient. Senate Majority Leader Barkley has been unwilling to enter any such agreement, and any individual Senator would be free to offer neutrality bill provisions as an amendment.

Next Fight Uncertain

Where the Administration will strike next in its effort to get Senate action on its 6-point neutrality program was open to speculation. The President said no decisions has been reached on whether to send a message to Congress. Barkley said, "I frankly do not know what we will do."

Even if the Senate fails to attempt to add the neutrality bill to the proposed Japanese embargo, leaders pointed out yesterday that, under Senate rules, it would be "germane" to any pending bill not carrying general appropriations.

When the Senate Foreign Relations Committee meets this morning to consider Japanese embargo proposals, it will have both embargo pills before it.

Senator Pittman's bill empowers the President to embargo the shipment of arms, munitions, oil or metals whenever he determines any nine-power pact signatory has violated guarantees to China in the treaty.

The second, by Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington, also is based on the nine-power pact, and would embargo shipment of all commodities, except farm products. But it would retain power for Congress to nullify the President's proclamation within 60 days.

A revised bill, adjusting the differences between the two measures and probably dropping the requirement for Congressional approval, is expected to be given the committee today.

Arrests Disclose Nazi Agents Bribed Press of France

Special Cable to The Post.

Paris, July 13.—Important revelations showing how Nazi agents, through lavish use of bribes, are financing the defeatist campaign in the French press in an attempt to detach France from the Polish alliance and bring about a second "Munich" on the Danzig issue, are expected to follow the arrests of two French newspapermen charged today with disseminating Hitler propaganda.

One of the men arrested is M. Aubin, news service chief of Le Temps, the most widely known newspaper in France, whose editorial pronouncements on foreign policy are usually regarded as reflecting government views. The other is Poirier, of the advertising department of Le Figaro, a leading rightist morning paper.

Le Temps and Le Figaro have issued statements declaring they have no connection with any of the improper activities with which the employes are charged. The affair is hushed in official silenc.

Both arrests were made on order of military authorities. It is significant this action by French police follows the expulsion from France of Herr Abetz, a notorious agent of Joachim von Ribbentrop, German foreign minister. Abetz is believed to have been sent from France for attempting to influence leading French politicians and journalists.

Premier Edouard Daladier, in his speech to Parliament June 27, said: "It has become known to us that attempts are being made to involve France in a network of trickery, intrigue, espionage, perhaps even worse."

Herr Abetz, was the chief of Nazi propaganda services in France. He operated directly under the immediate control of Ribbentrop. The purpose of the Nazi organism was to contact influential men. Abetz, made a huge success in his field.

President Asks $2,000,000 For Dirigible

Revives Hope Navy Will Resume Large Airship Development

President Roosevelt asked Congress yesterday to appropriate funds for a $2,000,000 dirigible, reviving hopes of airship men that the Navy will resume the development of large lighter-than-air ships.

In asking immediate appropriation of $300,000 and contract authorization for the remainder, the President reversed a decision of two months ago. At that time, he threw out all bids for construction of a new airship, permitting a $500,000 appropriation to lapse, and announced that the Navy would abandon dirigible construction for the present.

President Sees Emergency

Other defense developments yesterday were:

President Roosevelt declared that the interests of "national defense require the establishment of naval aviation bases" on Palmyra, Johnston and Midway islands in the mid-Pacific and at Kodiak and Sitka, Alaska, "at the earliest practicable date" in suspending eight-hour day required by law on Government construction projects. Suspension of the law is permitted "in case of national emergency."

Lindbergh Bay, at St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, was transferred from the Interior Department to the Navy under an executive order, for construction and operation of a naval air station. Plans call for expansion of a Marine air base in the Virgin Island into a general naval air station.

The Navy awarded a $2,797,000 contract to the Electric Boat Co. for construction of the 700-ton submarine Mackeral. The craft, of a new type, will be about half the size of most of the existing submersibles, and is designed for coastal use.

Acting Scretary of the Navy Edison is understood to have had much to do with reviving the airship project. He often has championed the airship against efforts to abandon developmnt in this field.

Up to Congress

It is understood that if Congress provides the funds, bids will be asked on a ship of 1,000,000 cubic feet, about half the size of the Los Angeles. Such a dirigible will be useful as a training ship and to keep the art alive, but is not large enough to test out the worth of an airship as a plane carrier.

At the same time, Secretary of War Woodring announced the locations of two of the five major air bases to be constructed under the air expansion program. The main base for southeastern United States will be established 6 miles from Tampa, Fla., while a main air depot for the same area will be at Mobile, Ala.

The air expansion program provides bases in Puerto Rico, Panama, Alaska and northeastern United States as well. Decision has not been reached as to their location.

Front Royal Girl Attacked, Robbed In Md. Job Quest

Baltimore, July 13 (AP).—Meager descriptions were the only clues Baltimore County police had today in their search for two young men alleged to have beaten, assaulted and robbed a Virginia girl near Halethorpe last night.

The girl, who came here from Front Royal to look for work, said she was let out near the Baltimore city line by a truck driver who gave her a ride from her home. She walked two blocks toward the center of town, she said, when the two men pulled her into their car, drove her to a field, beat her semi-conscious, took $30 from her purse, assaulted her and dumped her out on the ground.

Her cries attracted passersby. She is being cared for by the Travelers' Aid Society.

Curb on Coughlin To Be First Test Of Radio Code

Special Dispatch to The Post

Atlantic City, July 13.—The new code of ethics for radio, adopted by the National Association of Broadcasters on Tuesday, will be put to its first practical test next fall, when the association will attempt to apply the use of paid radio time for presentation of controversial issues to the program of the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, Detroit radio priest, officials disclosed today as the seventeenth annual convention of the N. A. B. was concluded.

The regulation, if upheld in Father Coughlin's case, would, in the opinion of those who drafted the code, severely limit his influence on American public opinion by reducing his time on the air by making available free radio time for rebuttal of his opinions.

Navy Renews Efforts to Lift Squalus After Sub Snaps Pontoon Chains and Sinks

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Narrowly missing Navy salvage workers in a small boat, the submarine Squalus reared unexpectedly to the surface off Portsmouth, N. H., yesterday, broke its lifting chains and tossed the heavy pontoons about on churning water. Nose of the sub can be seen pitching water upward at right

Squalus' flooded stern, still the tomb of 26 men who drowned after the accident May 23, had been raised 85 feet from the ocean floor, exactly as planned.

The next instant, two of the big lifting pontoons suddenly shot to the surface, the Squalus' bow between them. A clear 20 feet of the forward part of the 290-foot craft was pointed skyward, almost vertically, as though its stern already was resting on the muddy bottom 240 feet below.

Just as suddenly as it appeared, the bow vanished. On the roiled surface remained four of the seven big pontoons that had been used as lifting devices, all obviously sheared from their moorings, and two of them spouting water.

Rear Admiral C. W. Cole, commandant of the Portsmouth Navy Yard, who has directed the salvage operations, told the technical story in the following message flashed to his aides ashore from the salvage ship Falcon:

Easier Job Expected

"Lifted stern of Squalus with five pontoons about 85 feet clear of bottom. Then lifted bow with two pontoons, blowing ballast tanks forward. Both pontoons came to the surface followed by bow. Forward sling carried away and bow sank. One sling aft carried away and two lower pontoons on sling surfaced. Stern sank with remaining pontoons possibly in a damaged condition. Think Squalus on even keel at bottom. Two chains still remain under stern."

Tribute to Victims

As a tribute to the men who died aboard the Squalus, the House today unanimously passed and sent to the Senate a bill authorizing the United States Marine Band to play at memorial services at Rye Beach, N. H., July 30, for the victims. Survivors are expected to attend.

Reserves to Join British Sea Games

servist announcement, made no reference to the European situation, members of Parliament generally said the action undoubtedly was another demonstration of Britain's might for the benefit of Germany.

They said it was a companion move to mass flights of Royal Air Force bombers over France which the air ministry started earlier this week to give pilots practice in long-range flying and at the same time to display Britain's air power to the continent.

Navy Review in August

The naval reserves will report for duty July 31 and will take part in a gigantic review before King George VI August 9 at Weymouth. About 130 vessels will participate.

Shortly after the review, the 56 reserve ships will join the fleet for exercises which will continue until the third week in September.

Authoritative circles regarded it as significant that the reserves still would be on duty and the home fleet at its full strength during the Nazi party congress starting September 2 in Nurnberg.

By that time Britain's rapidly expanding land army will have reached nearly 750,000 men—the largest peacetime army in the nation's history. The first 30,000 conscript soldiers are scheduled to report this week-end.

[The battle station of the home fleet is off Inverness, Scotland, in position to blockade the German navy in the North Sea, and this is where last year's exercises were held when the fleet was mobilized in the Czecho-Slovak crisis, according to the United Press.—Editor's note.]

Reserve Classifications

Admiralty sources indicated the following classifications of reserve ships would be commissioned for the fall exercises:

One battleship, one aircraft carrier, sixteen cruisers, one minelayer, one destroyer depot ship, 32 destroyers and four submarines.

All are in home ports at present.

Men to be called up include royal fleet reserves and pensioners; royal navy reserves (men drawn from the mercantile service); fleet wireless reserves; and a number of officers from the retired list.

The royal fleet reserve is composed of men who have served seven years in the fleet and then do five years on reserve. The pensioners are men who have completed 22 years in the navy.

London's Air Defenses Ready

By the United Press.

London, July 13.—London is being protected night and day by nine lines of anti-aircraft defenses between the coast and the capital, military circles disclosed tonight.

The guns include new 3.7-inch weapons and 3-inch Swedish Bofors quick-firing anti-aircraft batteries.

The Star, afternoon newspaper, said today regarding London's air defenses:

"Each of the 3.7's is guided onto attacking planes electrically. Together they can hurl shells weighing 56 pounds to a height of 7 miles at the rate of 50 shells a minute."

For many months anti-aircraft guns, detectors, searchlights and communications stations have been manned continually by members of the Teritorial Army (National Guard) charged with defense against air attack. New military appropriations announced only today provide for permanent, 24-hour-a-day manning of the balloon barrages, also a vital part of London's defense against air attack.

The great industrial cities of the Midlands—Liverpool, Manchester, Birmingham, Leeds, Bradford and Sheffield—flashed off their lights tonight for England's second major blackout and air raid test of the summer.

Italy Protests French Cession Of Alexandretta

By James M. Minifie.

Special Dispatch to The Post

Rome, July 13.—Italian objection to France's cession of Alexandretta to Turkey which was the price of the Franco-Turkish treaty, were officially made known today with the publication of the text of a note delivered to the Quai D'Orsay last Monday. They are based on failure to consult with Italy as one of the grantors of the mandate, and alleged violation of the principle of popular self-determination.

In three brief paragraphs, Italy, as one of the members of the San Remo Conference in 1920, which bestowed the Syrian mandate on France, "has the honor to make every and the most ample reservation" on the Franco-Turkish agreement which, the government announced, is read about in the press.

Furthermore, the Italian government observes that the agreement was "negotiated and concluded without its knowledge and consent and appears in clear contrast to the scope of the mandate and the will of the population concerned."

New Book Reveals Novelist Dickens As 'Wicked Man'

London, July 13 (U.P.).—Charles Dickens was a "very wicked man" who forsook his wife after 22 years of marriage and took an 18-year-old actress as mistress, a book written by Gladys Storey, intimate of the novelist's youngest daughter, said today.

The book, "Dickens and Daughter," said that the novelist at the age of 46 became infatuated with blond Ellen Lawless Ternan, left his wife, Catherine, for her and was her admirer until his death. He was able to keep the affair secret, the book said, adding that it revealed the liaison for the first time.

The source of the material was given by Kate Perungini, younger daughter and third child of Dickens, who died in 1929 at the age of 89. The author of the book long was an intimate friend of Kate.

Autopsy Slated In Death of Man in River

Charles County Sheriff Suspects a Murder; Victim Unidentified

Saying they still don't know whether the man whose body was found floating in the Potomac River at Marshall Hall, Wednesday, was drowned or slain, Charles County authorities last night said an autopsy would be held at 10 a. m. today with a view to establishing, or abolishing, the murder theory.

The autopsy will be conducted at Waldorf by Dr. J. Howard Maldeis, State coroner, of Baltimore. He was called into the case yesterday by State's Attorney J. Edelen.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has been given such record of the case as exists, but late yesterday the Maryland authorities had not received the F. B. I.'s finding.

Victim's Watch Running

Sheriff Robert V. Cooskey, of Charles County, throughout yesterday clung to his belief that the man was murdered. He pointed out that the man's watch was still running, indicating that the body had not been long in the water.

The man's straw hat, a "Mallory," was found floating near the body. It was of size 7¼ and was said to have been purchased at "Cohen's" Store in Alexandria. The sheriff proclaimed matters at a standstill until it can be determined who the man is.

There was a handkerchief initialed "L" and a Baltimore optician's case in the man's pockets. These slight clues, however, have not afforded the authorities a clear lead, they stated.

No One Views Body

Dr. James L. McKavanagh, serving as coroner for Charles County in the case, said that he and Edelen called in the State coroner. It was said at Ryon's Funeral Parlor, in Waldorf, that no one had been there through yesterday to view the body with a view to making identification.

A Falls Church woman suggested to Washington police that the man's description coincided somewhat with that of a Falls Church man who has been missing from home since May. She said she would go to Waldorf to attempt an identification, but she had not made an appearance there early last night.

Two Washington men who had gone up the river bank from Marshall Hall to swim discovered the body. It appears to have been of a man about 50 years old, five feet, eight inches tall and weighing 160 pounds. He wore a three-piece gray suit, with tiny blue check.

Ryan Renamed Head Of Longshoremen

New York, July 13 (AP).—Joseph P. Ryan, president of the International Longshoremen's Association (A. F. of L.), was re-elected by acclamation to his fourth successive four-year term today—with a salary increase from $15,000 to $20,000 a year.

News of Capital Night Clubs

Aces all! Art Barker's Trio, now appearing at Mayfair

MADRILLON PICTURE: "Well, All Right," newest hit, being given a neat shaking up by Carr Van Sicklen, Don Shook and the boys . . . Parker running round and round trying to find a ringside table. But there aren't any . . . Annapolis midshipmen very handsome in their "whites." Greeter Martin comes by to say that he's going to the Hotel Istanbul, at Asbury Park, N. J., on July 23, and for two weeks will live on shish kabob, dolma and other Oriental dishes. It develops that Martin's part owner of the Istanbul, the nabob! . . . Parker finds a ringside table . . . Carr Van Sicklen tells us that "Teeter-Totter" will be the successor of the "Three Li'l Fissies." He's having it arranged for the Madrillon Orchestra, and it will be played next week . . . Along come Carlos (who looks like Rudy Valentino) and Ramon, very elegant in white mess jackets. They sing "Rancho Grande" with vaquero fire, confide that the success of "Juarez" has made "La Paloma" the most currently popular of Latin-American songs.

TRIPLE SCORE. Those fiery pinwheels on rollers, the Helen Reynolds Skating Girls, will be held over on the Shoreham Terrace for a third week. If the patrons have anything to say about it, the girls will stay until the ice skating season rolls around.

MUSIC WITH A "LIFT": Morton Gould's "Pavanne" (it's the second movement of his American Symphonette, No. 2) now being played inspiringly in the Lounge Riviera, by Pete Macias' Orchestra. Artie Humes' arrangement is on the superlative side.

All of these college songs done so zestfully by the Metronome Room Penguins that both the "old boys" and the undergrads come up to the bandstand and inquire about the arrangements. Credit to Arranger Bill Dunmore.

"Yes, Yes, Yes," when Eve Knight sings it in the King Cole Room. P. S.: She doesn't mean a word of it.

"Gypsy Camp," played by Harold Veo at Maryland Gardens. This is Harold's own composition. And he has the gift for Gypsy melody.

"Turkey in the Straw" when the Neptune Room's Four Girls of Note give it that spanking swing. Trumpet Player Ida Woodward doubles on the harmonica for this one, incites the patrons to rounds of applause.

Those dreamy Spanish songs done by Bert Bernath in the Calton Cocktail Lounge. All that's needed is a Seville moon.

BUSY HI HAT: Hi Hat's like a bee hive. Tonight comes Angie Rodante's anniversary party, certain to pack the place with the friends of this popular little canary. Customers galore are also crowding in to hear the Aloha Serenaders who will say "Aloha" to Washington on Saturday eve. And on Monday Jack Manning's "Strings of Romance" will make their Hi Hat bow.

STOMPIN' THE SAVOY: That's the specialty of Bamboo Gardens' lovely Nadine, one of the most sparkling and expert girl tap dancers ever to prance across a Washington night club floor. The Five Darlings are just that. They're all tanned as young Indians, make an eye-filling picture in sketchy sailor costumes. P. S.: The Ladies Auxiliary No. 2, of the Ancient Order of Hibernians took over Bamboo the other eve. Sure, it was a great night for the Irish.

HERE COMES CARL: Glen Echo will present Carl Lorch and his orchestra on Monday eve. Shirley Dean, the Lorch lark, is the prettiest singer to come to town this season, judging by her picture. N. B.: Tonight and tomorrow are the last for Little Joe Hart and his orchestra. You're a this-and-that if you miss him.

BALLOON BUSTERS: Lotus' Sis and Buddy Roberts are doing a balloon dance that should make Sally Rand turn sea-green with jealousy. It's true that Sis and Buddy wear twice as much clothes as Sally, but then they're 20 times funnier.

HITHER AND THITHER DEPARTMENT: Mayfair's softball team will play the N. B. C. announcers this after. Two to one that the radio boys won't be broadcasting this one, when it's all over.

Al Senior is taking Drummer Lew Berman's spot on the Rainbow Room bandstand for a week or so. But Al will be back for the Rainbow anniversary party. Or he'd better be.

Myrah, seeress of the Roger Smith roof garden, tells us that a certain Senator's palm indicates he'll run for the presidency, also that his wife will be a great political help to him.

EDIBLES AND DRINKABLES: Do try the Cromesquis a la Russe at luncheon in the Mayflower Lounge. You don't know what they are. Well, you'll never regret finding out . . . The Uptown lounge's Singapore Sling is something that people sip and say, "Well, isn't this sump'n'." It's made with cherry brandy . . . O'Donnell's Farm on Sunday afternoon is a good deal like Eden. Except that they didn't have butter-broiled steaks in Eden . . . A tall and potent rum collins will give you a streamlined start on one of Hall's seafood dinners.

Recall Too Late, Roosevelt Asserts

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt told the Senate yesterday he could not accept its request to return the notice of confirmation of Elmer D. Davies to be United States District judge for the Middle Atlantic district of Tennessee.

In a message to the Senate, the President said the resolution asking return of the resolution of confirmation was delivered to his office at 12:30 p. m. (E. S. T.) yesterday. Before its receipt, Mr. Roosevelt said, he had "signed and sent out a commission appointing Judge Davies, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate."

The Senate confirmed the nomination Wednesday and a few hours later voted to ask the President to return it. Senator Barbour (Republican), of New Jersey, who offered the motion for return of the confirmation notice, had been absent when the Senate assented to the appointment. He told reporters it had been reported that Davies was antagonistic toward colored people and once was a member of the Ku Klux Klan.

Davies had testified before a Senate committee that he had joined the Klan years ago but had attended only one meeting and had not paid dues.

Company Fined $29,743 Under Walsh-Healy Act

The Department of Labor yesterday ruled that the Sigmund Eisner Company, of New Jersey, must pay a fine of $29,743.18 and be refused Government contracts for three years for alleged violation of the Walsh-Healy act.

L. Metcalfe Walling, administrator of the Division of Public Contracts, who made the decision, said hearings and records showed the company to be guilty of working employes more than eight hours a day without paying the time and one-half rate, of refusing to pay minimum wages stipulated in contracts, and of falsification of records.

The company has had over $2,500,000 worth of Government contracts, mostly for cotton and woolen trousers, since the act went into effect three years ago, Walling said.

Vinson Raps 'Repeaters' in Navy Posts

Nimitz Replies Only 1 Pct. of Officers Have Been Here Previously

Chairman Vinson of the House Naval Committee charged yesterday that a "hierarchy" had been created at the Navy Department by officers repeatedly returning here for duty.

"In my 20 years on the committee I have seen the same officers come back to Washington so often they leave their earmark on all naval legislation," he declared at a hearing on legislation to bar officers from Washington duty for seven years after completing an assignment here.

Admiral Nimitz Disagrees

Rear Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, testifying for the Navy Department, disagreed with Vinson's statements, declaring that only about 1 per cent of the officers on duty here have served in Washington previously.

"Naval officers do not consider duty here especially desirable," Nimitz declared. "I would rather stay at sea or on the West Coast."

Questioned by Vinson, Admiral Nimitz said that of the Navy's 67 admirals only 27 were at sea. The committee chairman then contended there are too many high-ranking naval officers and too few admirals at sea. He said there were five flag officers in the Bureau of Operations here alone.

Vinson Asks "New Blood"

Vinson contended that presence of "so many repeaters" at the Navy Department was the reason the Navy was having so much trouble with its personnel legislation.

"Let's bring some new blood and new ideas to the Navy Department," he declared.

The committee resumes consideration of the bill this morning.

National Award Given to D. C. Safety Board

Plaque and $150 Cash For Traffic Campaign Presented at Luncheon

The Washington Post-Junior Board of Commerce Traffic Safety Institute was awarded national honors yesterday for outstanding work in the field of highway safety promotion during 1938.

A bronze plaque and $150 in cash were presented to the junior board's safety committee, headed by Ross Guthrie, at a "victory luncheon" in the Annapolis Hotel. The award was offered by the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce, after various projects of the local organization were submitted in a Nation-wide contest.

The Post, for its part in the prize-winning safety program, was praised at yesterday's meeting by Lyle O'Rourke, president of the group last year.

Five Awards Received

"The Washington Post and your committee," O'Rourke told members of the Junior Board gathered to witness presentation exercises, "did one of the best jobs in the country. We are proud of the undertaking and proud that its success merited national recognition."

The traffic safety award was one of five collected by the local board for its 1938 activities.

First prize went to Bernard J. Nees for his work as chairman of the membership committee; first prize to Ben Morgan as chairman of the publicity comittee; second prize to John W. Brabner-Smith, chairman of the Beautify Washington Committee, and second prize to John Dewicki, chairman of the Comittee for D. C. Referendum.

Motorists Enrolled in Drive

The Washington Post-Junior Board Traffic Safety Institute was founded early last year to foster general motoring improvements for Washington. Its major undertaking was the enrollment of local commercial and private car owners in a city-wide "drive safely" campaign. Emblems were distributed to fleet operators, individual motorists and agencies of the District and Federal Government who pledged themselves to year-round safe driving practices. More than 5,200 vehicles were enrolled.

The institute also sponsored a large billboard in front of the District Building calling upon Washingtonians to protect life and property on the highway.

Faculty Interference Denied In Operation of G. W. Hatchet

Prof. Bennett Says Editor Was Not Ousted From Post; Points Out Student Committee Did Not Approve His Nomination

No issue of faculty censorship is involved in the George Washington University student life committee's failure to accept the nomination of Frank F. Burnet as editor of The Hatchet, student paper, it was asserted yesterday by Prof. DeWitt Bennett, commitee chairman.

Burnet claimed yesterday he was "fired" by the student life committee after editing the last five issues of the spring term. He attributed the action to The Hatchet's campaign for revision of a rule prohibiting establishment of George Washington branches of the American Student Union and similar organizations.

"It isn't a question of firing anybody," Bennett said. "Mr. Burnet was nominated by the student editorial board, to take office in September. The nomination was not approved and no other editor will be named until plans are completed for an entirely new setup on The Hatchet."

Numerous complaints have been received because Hatchet promotions "were not always based on merit," according to Bennett. "The new organization probably will make the editor responsible to the student editorial board instead of only to himself. And the student editorial board ought to be responsible to some larger and more representative body, primarily made up of student representatives. There is certainly no faculty censorship of the paper under consideration."

Burnet, who is 27, is a fourth-year night school student, with two years' experience as a member of the board of editors. "Freedom of the press is definitely involved," he said yesterday, calling for a protest meeting of interested students for July 21.

The student journalist charged that a faculty representative "ripped one editorial out of the forms" made up for the last issue of the 1938-39 school year. The article was "a cynical little piece" about commencement exercises and education in general, Burnet said.

Bennett replied that he never has heard of "anyone stopping the paper from printing whatever it wanted to."

Sommerville and Milford are in the woodcraft school while Tribie is a midshipman in the naval school.

President Asks $445,000 for Four Navy 'Penthouses'

President Roosevelt yesterday asked Congress to appropriate $445,000 for construction of four more "penthouses" on wings at the Navy Department.

An additional story was added to three of the department's wings during the past year to provide additional space for the Navy's expanding activities. The President recently asked Congress to authorize a new Navy Department building, but it would be four or five years at the earliset before this would become available, and additional office and drafting space is required at once, official declare.

Explorer Seeks 170 Dogs for Antarctic Trip

Ronne to Train Teams for Duty In Frozen World

"Dogs, to a polar expedition, are as important as the infantry to an army," Finn Ronne said yesterday. He will have charge of all dog teams on the Government expedition, which will leave for Antarctica sometime in October.

Admiral Richard E. Byrd, who is in charge of the expedition, and Government experts still are working out the details.

Ronne, who has been in Washington for some time, to make preliminary arrangements, will leave in a day or two for Boston and for the Chinook Kennels in Wonalancet, N. H. There the long business of selecting and assembling dog teams will begin.

Dogs for the polar expeditions must be of a particular breed, Ronne said, the husky type, most of whom have a savage strain of wolf in them, which gives them endurance and vigor on the trail.

From Labrador, Canada, Maine, Vermont and New Hampshire, these dogs will be sent to the Chinook Kennels for the next few months. There Ronne will test them for strength, size and intelligence, and begin the long job of training them in teams of nine dogs each, eight hitched in tandem, with a leader at the head of the column. He must also train the men who will drive the teams.

Besides the task of selecting 170 dogs for the journey, Ronne has the task of supervising construction of 36 sledges. These sledges, when transport all the supplies, will be made of hickory wood, and bound together with rawhide thongs. No metal will be used on them because wood and rawhide weather extreme cold more successfully.

This will be Ronne's second polar trip (he was with Admiral Byrd on the previous expedition) and he comes from a family of explorers.

River Parkway Program Pushed

plans for rerouting the Mount Vernon Memorial highway around the Bureau of Public Roads' testing laboratory to make room for buildings at the Gravelly Point Airport.

Also in the hands of the Planning Commission is the continued development of the George Washington Memorial Parkway, authorized by Congress in 1930. The first unit, which links Arlington and Key bridges, is completed.

Not the least important of the activities viewed yesterday from the air was the work to eradicate more than 8,000 acres of water chestnut extending several miles below Highway Bridge, under supervision of the Army Engineer's Office.

With chemical sprays and mowing machines, workers fought the plant pest, which forms huge green islands in the river. Officials fear that if the water chestnut is not wiped out, damage will be severe to navigation, fish and waterfowl.

Nearby, three dredges toiled at their daily task of pumping gravel from the river bed to "fill" the Gravelly Point Airport. E. A. Schmitt, chief engineer in the Army Engineer's Office for this district, yesterday asserted that the airport site is nearly half finished, with more than 8,000,000 cubic yards of the required 14,000,000 having been deposited.

The runways will be laid out on this made land. Airport buildings, however, will be located on existing land, necessitating the rerouting of the Mount Vernon Memorial highway in this vicinity.

Upstream, in Washington Channel, construction operations on the two modern yacht basins were viewed. Half of each basin is being built at a time. They are scheduled to be opened for partial use in about six weeks, each accommodating 80 watercraft. When completed early in 1940, they will have a capacity of 200.

When the yacht basins are completed, Army engineers will turn to replacing antiquated steamer piers with modern structures. All of this rehabilitation work is being undertaken under a $2,850,000 program, of which the District will contribute $389,000.

On Theodore Roosevelt Island, lying between Arlington and Key bridges, CCC recruits were seen at their chores of land-clearing and planting. Sponsored by the Theodore Roosevelt Memorial Association, this project is designed to provide Washingtonians and visitors with a secluded, woodland retreat, away from gasoline fumes and traffic noises, where they may stroll and picnic in blissful peace.

At Key Bridge work progressed on the construction of an additional arch on the Virginia side which, upon completion, will provide a by-pass around Rosslyn for the George Washington Memorial Parkway.

Cruising upstream, the observation blimp followed the route of the George Washington Memorial Parkway to Great Falls, looking down upon CCC enrollees working on the C. & O. Canal, which is being developed as a recreational area; the Navy's new ship model testing basin at Carderock, Md., and the approximate location of the proposed Great Falls bridge.

Just how soon the memorial parkway scheme will be fully realized depends upon the availability of funds. Completed, it will provide a 60-mile scenic drive along both sides of the Potomac, between Great Falls at one end and Fort Washington, Md., and Mount Vernon, Va., on the other.

Much of the necessary land in Virginia and Maryland, and some in the District, remains to be acquired. For Unit No. 2, between Key Bridge and Spout Run, Congress has appropriated $100,000, and Virginia $50,000, to buy land, with Arlington County to contribute another $50,000.

Eventually, a ferry service may be inaugurated to unite Fort Washington and Mount Vernon, which face each other across the Potomac.

When the waterway - parkway project is completed, Washington will have a system comparable to those of Boston, Westchester County (N. Y.), Minneapolis and several other cities which have outstripped the National Capital in this respect, in the opinion of city planners.

send the Federal agents here before Lewis asked Federal intervention.

Murphy said he would keep in constant touch with the Harlan situation and, if it were appropriate for the Federal Government to act, it would be done quickly.

He said he would rather not comment when asked whether there might have been violations of Federal law in Harlan.

Harlan was quiet, but there still was tenseness. Bonds totaling $257,000 were set for 223 union men, including Secretary-Treasurer George Titler of the Harlan District U. M. W., arrested after yesterday's shooting at the Mahan-Ellison mine. Titler's bond was fixed at $16,000.

Because of the large sum involved in the bonds, local C. I. O. officials appealed to national headquarters in Washington for help in getting the men out of jail. Their examining trials were set for Monday. Late in the day, 42 of the men were released when relatives and friends signed their $1,000 bonds.

Titler's wife, arrested at the mine, was freed on $1,000 bond on the charge of "banding and confederating."

Charges against Titler included sedition, forcible rebellion, armed attack on a National Guardsman and banding and confederating to intimidate. Bonds of $1,000 up were assessed against all the others, charged with banding and some with other charges, including carrying concealed weapons.

Another development at Washington was the statement of Representative Hoffman (Republican), Michigan, saying the "major share of responsibility" for the shooting affrays rested with Lewis. Hoffman said Dock Caldwell, miner fatally shot in the skirmish, lost his life because "he attempted to follow the decree of Lewis that no one in Harlan County should work until he had joined the United Mine Workers of America."

Danzig Nazi Chief Talks With Hitler

Free City of Danzig, July 13 (AP).—An official announcement issued here said Albert Forster, Nazi district leader in Danzig, had a long talk today with Adolf Hitler at the Fuehrer's mountain retreat at Berchtesgaden.

The subject of their conversation was not announced, but it was taken for granted they canvassed thoroughly the current situation in the Free City.

Roaches Around the Laundry Tubs?

Here's how to get rid of them. First, keep the floor under the tubs always clean and dry—free from dampness, soap chips, etc. That's what attracts bugs. Second, get a can of Bee Brand Insect Powder. Sprinkle it behind the tubs and around the openings where the pipes go through the wall and floor. Blow it into cracks and crevices, back of and under wall boards. When roaches come out, give them another dose of powder. Third, sprinkle Bee Brand Powder in the path where roaches travel. Repeat these directions at weekly intervals, and your laundry will soon be free of roaches.

Bee Brand really kills roaches, ants and other crawling insects quick—yet it's entirely safe to use around the house. Insist on the genuine Bee Brand Insect Powder—in the red and yellow can. It's sold with a guarantee of satisfaction or your money back. Three sizes: 10c, 35c, 50c

NOTE: You can also kill roaches and ants, as well as flies and mosquitoes, with Bee Brand Insect Spray. Read directions on can.

Civic Dreams Are Coming True Along the Potomac River

1. AIRPORT—Most conspicuous of the Potomac improvements which are beautifying and rejuvenating the Capital's own "old man river" is the Gravelly Point Airport project, shown here with the new testing laboratory of the Bureau of Public Roads in foreground. The Mount Vernon Memorial highway, running through center of picture, is to be rerouted around the laboratory buildings. National Capital Park and Planning Commission is to inspect the proposed relocation site today

2. WASHINGTON CHANNEL—For years an eyesore, this busy inlet of the Potomac is being cleaned up by the Army Engineer's Office. Each of the two new yacht basins, shown under construction, will accommodate 100 boats. They will be opened for half-capacity use in about six weeks

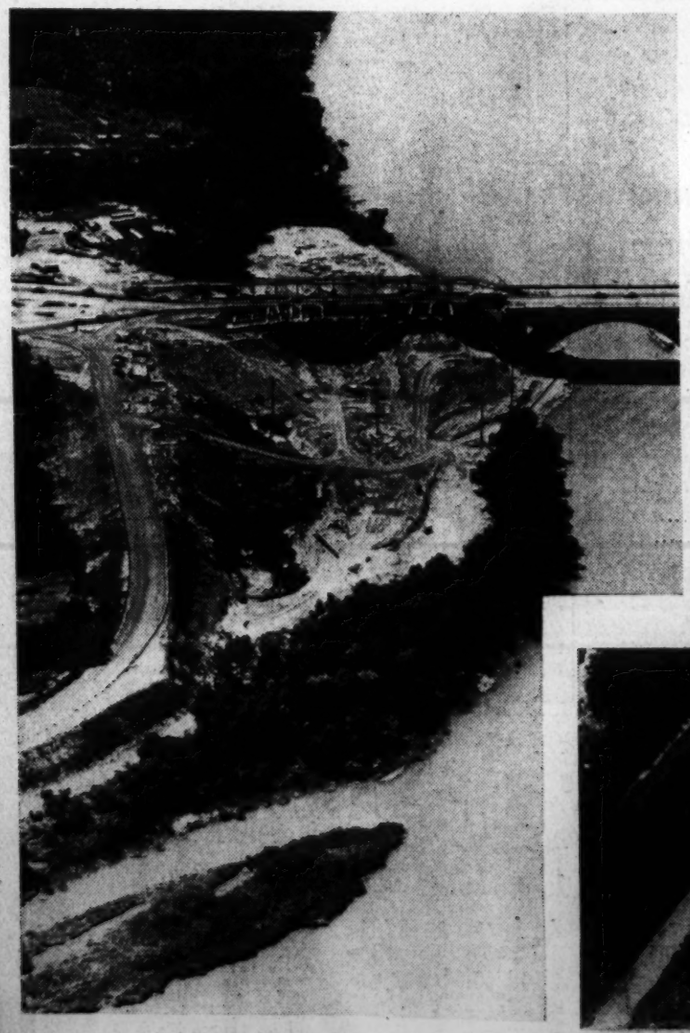
4. THEODORE ROOSEVELT ISLAND—For several years CCC recruits have been cleaning up and planting trees on this island, formerly known as Analostan, between Key and Arlington bridges. Designed to be a memorial to Theodore Roosevelt, this project is administered by a private association, which plans to turn it into a "forest primeval," where the public may browse provided it leaves its autos on the mainland

Post Staff Photos from the Goodyear blimp Enterprise by William Klemm and Charles del Vecchio



5 NEW SPAN—This close-up of work now under way at the Virginia end of Key Bridge shows how the added span will permit the George Washington Memorial Parkway to pass beneath

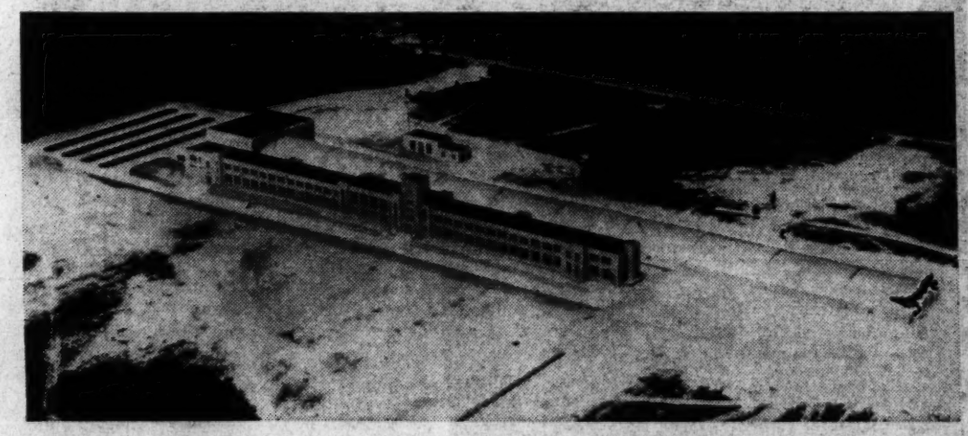
8. CCC CAMP—Only a few hundred yards from the testing basin is the CCC camp, where two companies are quartered. They are responsible for clearing the old C. & O. Canal and making it usable for recreational purposes between Georgetown and Seneca, Md.



7. TESTING BASIN—A few miles upstream, at Carderock, Md., is the Navy's recently completed ship model testing basin, which will become far more familiar to the public when it is made more accessible by the new parkway

9. DEBRIS—This section of the C. & O. Canal, near Great Falls, gives an idea of the work to be done before the nineteenth century waterway, now filled with debris, becomes fit for canoeing, rowing and other holiday pursuits

U. S. Builds 62% Of World's Autos

Secretary of Commerce Hopkins announced yesterday that world production of motor vehicles in 1938 totaled 4,000,809 units, the United States accounting for 2,489,085, or 62 per cent of total output.

"Economic and political disturbances prevailing in many countries and an increasing tendency toward more stringent import restrictions and exchange control measures adversely affected world motor vehicles production after five years of uninterrupted improvement," according to Secretary Hopkins. World output dropped 37 per cent last year.

Auto plants in the United States and Canada accounted for 66.4 per cent of world auto output in 1938, compared with 78.8 per cent in 1937.

Seversky Visions Flare-up Abroad In September

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, July 13.—Maj. Alexander P. de Seversky, noted military airplane designer, who has just returned from a seven months' tour of European aviation centers, said today in an interview that "things will begin to happen" abroad in September when Germany's newest airplane types are shifted into peak production. The interview took place at a luncheon of aviation writers at the 21 Club here.

The danger of a conflagration in Europe in October arises from the fact that England has made some remarkable strides in aerial rearmament and is in no mood to take anything further from the totalitarian powers, Maj. De Seversky said. On the other hand, he continued, Germany was grim and determined to take Danzig. Maj. De Seversky voiced the opinion, however, that Germany would never make a direct attack on either France or Britain.

Doubly Deficient

Few Americans who set national welfare above imaginary partisan advantage are deriving any solid satisfaction from the situation created by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee when it refused to consider neutrality law amendment at this session.

In doing so, the committee prolonged the status quo. But that status quo is viewed with misgiving by all who appreciate the precariousness of peace. An intelligent Republican viewpoint was voiced by Representative Wadsworth, in his thoughtful radio speech on Wednesday night. He then asserted his belief that the inflexible embargo provision of the present law "is a great mistake," that it "places the United States in a false position" and that "in the end it will prove dangerous to our peace."

At the same time this automatic embargo provision is anything but satisfactory to those Administration leaders who believe that the surest way to make war less probable is to avoid giving aid and comfort to aggressors, and to avoid weakening their potential victims by prohibiting them from buying American arms, munitions and implements of war in time of conflict.

There is still a neutrality law on the statute books. It is the law passed in 1937, minus the so-called cash-and-carry clause which expired May 1. But the expiration of this clause means that, in the event of a European war, Americans would be permitted to sell and to transport to belligerent countries all kinds of commodities indispensable to modern warfare. The embargo to be applied would affect only manufactured weapons.

It would be naive to assume that American farmers, laborers and manufacturers would refrain from using the occasion of a European war to improve their economic position. They would be only too eager to sell wheat and meat and copper and oil and everything else not prohibited by law to belligerent nations. Nor, under the law, would they be prohibited from sending those goods in American bottoms into whatever war zone may exist.

There are those in this country who believe that there is a fundamental distinction between what has been described as "lethal weapons" and other articles and materials. Belligerents will make no such distinction. There is all too good reason to believe with Senator Pittman that the neutrality act as it stands contains practically all the seeds of involvement in future war which existed in 1917.

The neutrality act without the cash-and-carry provision does little or nothing to insure against American involvement if war breaks out in Europe. But it does, as Representative Wadsworth points out, encourage an aggressive policy by the strong nation which "is armed to the teeth and does not need to purchase weapons in the carrying out of its plan of conquest."

All who are not hopelessly confused on the issue realize that we have on the statute books a so-called neutrality law with a decided tendency to precipitate the scales on the side of war. At the same time this law now carries no effective insurance against our involvement if war does break out.

It is in this dangerous and tragic situation that the present Congress proposes to leave the neutrality problem.

Cherry Ripe

Again from Gettysburg a clarion call reminds a world, sore troubled and distressed, that there's a glint of sunshine in the gloom.

Fifteen hundred pickers are busy with the second largest crop of cherries ever harvested in Adams County, Pa., and several hundred more people will be employed in two large canning factories. The total isn't exactly a multitude, but at least it makes a sizable dent in unemployment in one section of the county. And think of the cherry-pie eaters who will rejoice.

July is a torrid month and from time to time it has also been a horrid month, with man's propensity for combat adding untold misery to the discomforts imposed by Nature. So was it in 1863. So was it in 1914. So is it now. Yet the picture is not all bad. July is the month when cherries ripen. The little old man in a red topcoat is ever a harbinger of good cheer.

Intolerable

Many observations illuminating for Washingtonians were made in the course of the House debate which preceded rejection of the conference report on the District revenue legislation. The most telling of all fell from the lips of Representative Nichols, of Eufaula, Okla., whose role in the proceedings was highly instrumental throughout.

"There are only two things in this bill," said Mr. Nichols, "which can affect materially your constituents or my constituents back home. One of them is the Federal contribution and the other is the amount of money appropriated to carry on further investigations of a subject that has already been overinvestigated."

That this frank statement accurately represented the feeling of the House was soon demonstrated. At the close of debate that body overwhelmingly decided that its conferees shall hold to the $5,000,000 contribution and "shall not agree to any provision for a joint committee to study tax problems for the District of Columbia." The Senate managers yesterday properly refused to continue conferences under this edict for complete surrender to the House. And so the deadlock rests, with the prospect of a payless payday tomorrow only the first symptom of what is correctly defined as a breakdown of local government.

In furnishing the underlying explanation of this breakdown Mr. Nichols has done the District a real service, even though its value may not be immediately apparent. He has publicly admitted that the real criterion for the government of the City of Washington is found in the opinion of "your constituents or my constituents back home."

What Washington needs as a rapidly growing city is immaterial. What it should have to fulfill its role as the Capital of a great nation is unimportant. What its citizens want and are willing to pay for is outside the picture. The government of Washington is really controlled by the prejudices and opinions of the people of Eufaula and 50,000 other little communities which know nothing of Washington's needs.

This is more than a denial of the basic democratic principle of local self-government. It is a situation which, as events seem all too likely to demonstrate, will in time make impossible any form of effective municipal government for this city of over half-a-million American citizens. The people of Washington know that neither they, nor their elected representatives if they had any, could intelligently govern Mr. Nichols' home town of Eufaula, or similar distant communities. The representatives of these communities in Congress must, in simple justice, come to a realization that this incapacity works both ways.

Presumably some provisional solution of the present tangle will shortly be found. The city cannot indefinitely continue with a government of questionable legality, and it certainly cannot go on functioning without funds to pay its officials and employes. But if the Senate should decide to swallow the dictation of the House, or if some less objectionable escape from the very real emergency should be found, the basic problem would still remain. Washington would still be at the mercy of a legislature whose authority to govern the city is as unquestionable as is its incompetence to do so.

From the long-range viewpoint the present botchery may prove helpful. This community is so apathetic and so politically impotent that it will take something like a fiscal breakdown to demonstrate to all how vital is the need of fundamental reform. Year after year there are efforts to get such reform initiated. And year after year they fail. Soon or late some real collapse of local services will open people's eyes.

The real issue is not the pigeon-holed Griffenhagen report, nor even the amount of the Federal contribution, unfair though the steady pinching of the latter undoubtedly is. The underlying problem was posed by Mr. Nichols when he said in so many words that Washington has got to be governed as political considerations "back home" may dictate.

No municipality, least of all a great Capital, can operate indefinitely under that sort of remote control. It is no longer a question of whether the present arrangement must be replaced, but simply one of when the change will come. The utterly chaotic situation here today is indication that fundamental alterations can no longer be safely delayed.

A National Gallery

In donating his superb collection of old masters to the Nation, Andrew Mellon modestly termed it a "nucleus" of what he hoped the National Gallery of Art would some day contain. With the addition of the Samuel H. Kress collection of Italian painting and sculpture, the gallery is well on its way toward fulfilling the fondest wish of its progenitor.

Because of the quality of the paintings now to be included in the gallery collection when it opens next year, it will be not only of national, but of great international importance.

The Kress collection has been widely praised by experts not only for the beauty and quality of the paintings, but also for the fine condition in which they have been maintained. Indeed, it is a lifetime of work and care which Mr. Kress has generously bestowed upon the Nation. It is also a complete representation of the Italian school of painting.

In order to insure the presence of the collection at the opening of the gallery, Mr. Kress stripped his home. The sacrifice will be appreciated. But the loss to him, as Mr. Kress said in his letter to President Roosevelt, will be compensated by the knowledge that the art will have a permanent home. The enjoyment and edification which the works of the masters will bring to so many people should be an additional recompense. It is to be hoped that this notable example will be followed by other American possessors of the art treasures of the world.

Recall of Grandi

Of the men who participated with Mussolini in the so-called "March on Rome," which ushered in the Fascist regime almost 17 years ago, few won greater popularity than Dino Grandi. Like Italo Balbo, he achieved the dangerous distinction of being considered a potential successor to the Duce.

Perhaps this was the reason why Balbo, creator of Italy's modern air force, was sent to far-off Tripoli, to be governor of that unprofitable Italian colony, and why Grandi, who had been Italy's foreign minister, was named Ambassador to Great Britain, a post he has occupied with real distinction during the past seven years.

Count Grandi's summons to Rome at this time, to assume the headship of the ministry of justice, can thus hardly be dismissed as only of routine significance. Mussolini is fond of indulging in periodical changes of the guard. But there must be a particular reason why he has chosen to remove from the vital London post one of the best men in the Italian foreign service, placing him in what has been the relatively obscure and insignificant position of minister of justice.

That reason is by no means clear. It is possible that because of the growing unrest in Italy, which no amount of censorship has been able to conceal, Mussolini may be throwing his weight to the more conservative element in the Fascist Party and away from the extremist faction headed by Ciano, Starace and Farinacci respectively the Ribbentrop, Hess and Streicher of Italy.

As minister of justice, Balbo may have little to say as to any change in Italy's domestic or foreign policy. As an able, outspoken and vigorous individual who is better acquainted with Great Britain and the present British state of mind than any man in Mussolini's immediate entourage, Grandi's influence may prove preponderant.

Others, less informed than he is, may discount the revolutionary about-face in British policy and the determination of the European democracies to brook no new aggressions. Grandi will hardly make that mistake. If his recall to Rome means his restoration to Mussolini's favor, the bearing of this shift on Italian policy may well be constructive.

Spectators' Performance

The scene at the opening concert of the Sunset Symphonies was both beautiful and dramatic. The size and enthusiasm of the crowd spoke eloquently of the need which this series is designed to meet in Washington. Both weather and music were in harmony with the setting.

Despite all this, music lovers who arrived on time for the symphony were deprived, to a large extent, of what they came to hear. Ceaseless din from land, air and water, drowned out the music almost completely during the first half of the program. The cacophony was composed of sputtering motorboat engines, droning airplanes, popping photographers' bulbs, applause greeting the arrival of the President, and especially walking and talking in the aisles on the part of literally thousands of latecomers frantically looking for seats.

A certain amount of this pandemonium was inevitable, and part of it attendant on the first night only. But when an audience of 20,000 assembles for an event, the responsibility for success rests almost as heavily on the spectators as on the performers. The orchestra fulfilled its part of the engagement admirably Wednesday evening. The audience failed miserably to co-operate.

It would be advisable for ushers to allow people coming after start of the concert to be seated only between numbers, as in the winter.

We've never seen a last year's straw hat that looked like anything but a last year's straw hat.

Another thing we dislike about the School of Experience is that it never suspends for a vacation.

The Zero Year

From the Commentator

By a strange coincidence, beginning with 1840 every man elected to the Presidency in a year ending in a zero died in office. In other words, the President elected in 1840 and the one elected in every twentieth year thereafter failed to complete his term of office. The Presidents, with the dates of their election, are as follows:

1840—William H. Harrison.
1860—Abraham Lincoln.
1880—James A. Garfield.
1900—William McKinley.
1920—Warren G. Harding.

After considering this, the potential candidates may not be so anxious to capture the 1940 election.

Washington's Neutrality

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: That the neutrality act should be repealed and Washington's Proclamation of Neutrality, dated April 22, 1793, be enacted, by appropriate resolution or legislation, in its stead is apparently the only proposition upon which practically everyone, including members of the Congress, can agree.

Since the people generally, with good sense and reason, favor the views of Washington, as set forth in his neutrality proclamation, why not the Congress declare it to be the permanent foreign policy of the United States?

Both sides in the Congress declare their adherence to the principles of neutrality as defined by Washington in said proclamation. So, to avoid any argument, why not accept Washington's views in the words in which he stated them?

Since the United States can not change its law relating to neutrality during the progress of a war, without committing an act of war or subjecting itself to damages, the Congress should not adjourn without repealing the present neutrality act and giving legal effect to the views of Washington as herein expressed.

Fores for Gobs

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Navy is America's first line of offense and defense. It must always be to the fore. Therefore substitute for the objectionable "gobs" the word "fores." Websters definitions: "Fore—present; aline; within call; in advance; in a prominent position; to the front." In golf: "A word of warning cried by a player about to strike the ball."

Three Greats

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post family-tree editor has slipped again.

Charge up to him an item on the first page today that George VI of England is the great-great-grandson of George III.

We all know quite well that the present George is the great-grandson of Queen Victoria, daughter of the Duke of Kent, who was the fourth son of George III. Victoria was next in line to the British throne after the death of William IV, in 1837. So George VI is the great-great-great-grandson of the stupid King of 1776.

Of course this doesn't make much difference, except that a decent fellow like the King now on the throne should be given credit for all the generations he is removed from the Teutonic-minded monarch who ruled Britain when the American colonies were obliged to cast off.

Primaries for D. C.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a bona-fide resident and a taxpayer of the District of Columbia, I am writing to urge that you exercise now the power of your paper toward the passage of the Mullen Presidential primary bill for the District of Columbia.

I know that the rank and file in the District want this bill passed.

EDWARD H. SPINDLER.

Destruction of Parks

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With the erection of the Jefferson Memorial, it is sincerely hoped that the great man himself may not be aware of the awe with which the "people" of our Capitol City await a possible destruction of the natural beauty of Potomac Park. This memorial will be, of course, a most fitting tribute to one of our greatest men, and the taxpayers are glad to take part in its erection; but now, before it is too late, might not the landscape gardener be persuaded to have a heart and not destroy more of the natural beauty contiguous to the memorial than is necessary?

In this connection, the "people" of our Capitol City can but revert to the destruction a year or two ago of our loved "Old Park" (as it was familiarly known) which lay to the south of the Interior Building on F street. The large trees in this Old Park were a source of great pleasure to the people of the vicinity, some of whom could not afford to leave the city during the entire year.

But unfortunately some landscape gardener was given free hand in the Old Park and almost all of the grass plots were replaced with pavements of concrete. In the center of this concrete pavement there stands a small bubbling fountain, which doubtless was intended to be the crowning glory; but which, in comparison with the huge Interior Buildings on either side, it might be a teapot boiling over; and on either side of the "teapot" there is a concrete water container about 2 feet in depth.

These containers are anything but artistic. The do, however, afford pleasure to the children of the vicinity as wading pools sometimes upon those evenings when the water in the shallow containers, which has been heating in the sun all day, is not too hot for tender little feet.

And in the place of the large trees under which housewives used to assemble in the Old Park, in their stead there have been planted rows of prim bushes at the backs of the park benches. For a few days in early summer these bushes are radiant with pink blossoms which are most pleasing to those who drive by in their cars and who have time to stop and gaze out the window—but not a chance for a refreshing shade for the busy housewives of the vicinity!

And now the destruction of our lovely Potomac Park may be impending! At the dire possibility of which one can but hope that the refreshing old trees and grass plots contiguous to the memorial may not have to give way, as was the case in our Old Park to an artificial array of prim bushes and of concrete!

Bouquets

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One day last week several persons, seven in number, accidentally met at a downtown restaurant; and the general conversation turned to world events. The conversation finally wound up by six of the seven agreeing that Mr. Folliard, your reporter, did the best series of articles from day to day on the visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth to North America of any of the local papers. The seventh had not given much attention to Their Majesties' visit; but he also thought Mr. Folliard was one of the best local reporters doing special assignments.

Personally I think his background for each story made the picture as he painted it a living thing, not merely a chronology of events. His human interest anecdotes were brilliantly done. GROVER AYRES.
Washington, July 12.

Three Cheers

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Three cheers for Mr. Folliard's article on the Queen's visit to Mount Vernon. It was the best piece of writing I have seen in any paper on the royal visit.

MRS. ROBERT H. HOWARD.

Against The Kennedy Plan

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: American citizens living in the District of Columbia may witness a further setback to democracy. This arises out of the new-fangled reorganization scheme announced by Representative Kennedy.

This latest reorganization scheme decidedly worsens the situation in the District of Columbia and even further removes from any public pressure those who have been deciding our fate.

To give an appointive body, such as the Board of Commissioners would continue to be, the right to levy and assess taxes and appropriate and expend District money is much worse than leaving those cherished privileges in the hands of Congress. We elect neither Congressmen nor Commissioners, but some people do elect Congressmen and no people elect the Commissioners.

Some Congressmen may be defeated in their home District in part because of their record on District legislation. What a Congressman does about District matters will not only then become a part of his record but will affect to that extent his chances for re-election in his own District.

Congress is a much more representative body than the Board of Commissioners ever can be. The two civilian Commissioners do not necessarily represent the District merely because they fulfill certain residence qualifications. A far greater diversity of groups is represented in Congress.

This does not mean that Congress and not local residents should control their own taxation and expenditures. Local affairs should be conducted by those who are elected from the District by all those who live in the District.

Congressman Kennedy's new scheme merely compounds the tyranny which now exists in the District of Columbia. It entrenches the present political machine which fought bitterly against suffrage as a possibility. It increases their powers enormously. It adds high priced jobs and it sets up this new District administrator who is even one step further removed from public responsibility than are the District Commissioners.

Somebody must have pumped the President full of nonsense about the District if it is true that such a tyrannical scheme has his support.

Where are all the Congressional friends of District suffrage who from time to time vigorously call for local self-government? The friends of suffrage in Congress; if they are its true friends, have a splendid opportunity to amend the Kennedy reorganization plan by proposing as an amendment the Kennedy suffrage bill or any other suffrage plan which could be superimposed readily upon this new reorganization plan.

An elected city council, a representative city body, could and should have all the powers that Kennedy's new reorganization plan would give to the appointed District Commissioners and the city manager.

—And Crab Grass

THE PERSON who said "The only certain things in this world are death and taxes" was a very inefficient invoicer. He would have been some good if he had added "and crab grass." Beside that emblem of inevitability and inescapableness, the two things named are positively speculative; downright problematical.

Anybody that ever entered into that bitter fight known as "getting a good lawn" will actually scream "Amen" to that statement.

Crab grass is the rat, the teredos of the vegetable kingdom; the verdant embodiment of original sin. Try as you may to prevent its coming; try to eliminate it after it has come, and you will have merely entered into a perpetual romp with a tireless playmate that can run you ragged without ever drawing a labored breath. It makes up its mind deliberately. It is coming; and coming to stay. Its determination cannot be shaken. Compared with its wall, the rock of Gibraltar is a bit of weedy flotsam in the Saragasso Sea. It can take root where mildew would starve to death, and flourish in soil on which you couldn't raise anything else except a disturbance or an umbrella. It will move in on a lawn intended to be velvety, inhabited exclusively by nice, sissified, pantywaist blue grass or Shady Nook, and look on unconcerned and undiscouraged while that highbrow vegetation curls up and dies like a dog.

It will spread its roots in ground poorer than a cotton sharecropper in a bollweevil year, and grow calmly and thriftily, producing a bumper crop of seed. If only house plants that are always sickly and threatening to begin the more abundant life (with the accent on the moribund) could be crossed with this bit of incurable immortality, the problem of keeping fine window boxes and lush potted flowers would be solved once and for all.

As a gate-crasher, an intruder de luxe, a buttinsky extraordinary, crab grass has One-Eyed Connolly impersonating the shrinking violet. When it moves in on a party, it far outlasts the party. While it does much better in ground that has been coddled with various forms of humus and fertilizer and lime and peat, it really doesn't demand or require any of those reinforcing things. It is one of those broad-minded, generous creatures that will divide anything you have with you. From temporary and joint tenancy it progresses surely and rapidly to permanent and sole tenancy.

Recently Herself and I started a lawn. This was to be a thanwhich lawn. It was to contain nothing whatsoever except the best and most unadulterated of lawn grass. It was to be a veritable Caesar's wife of a grass plot. We bought the seed at important expense from a gardener and lawnster of serious mien under the sacred promise that there was nothing in that little hermetically-sealed poke except grass seed and more grass seed—that is, blue grass and other forms of grass with at least a high school education. Not a lowbrow seed in a trainload.

That grass came up within a reasonable time of our careful—nay, our prayerful—plantinf. It was thicker than the hair on the proverbial (not the Mexican hairless) dog. There was a lawn, we wanted all and sundry to know; a lawn as was a lawn! Not a spear or a leaf of any alien, slum-dwelling verdure in the outfit! As it spread and each seed began stemming out, we grew prouder and prouder. We preened it. We petted it. We cooed over it. We sat up nights and held its hand. Nothing wrong with that lawn; no (figurative) flies on it.

(Slow music, please.)

Recently, after a cutting, we noticed that some broader blades peered up here and there; some clumps of those aforesaid broad blades. A closer and more panicky inspection showed us that we had before us a job of squatting and hunckering on that beautiful velvet for days at a time, cultivating rheumatism, grabbling down beneath these little single roots and the sprangly crowns, and uprooting—of all things—crab grass! "Lafayette, we are here," it chorteld to us. The pestiferous and unsnubable stuff cared not a whit for the frostiness of our welcome or even for our most vituperous dismissal. It grew and it grew. Let every discernible blade and stalk of it be removed one day, an inspection stroll over the most recently and most thoroughly de-crab-grassed portions would reveal blades that had either been overlooked or that had positively squirted up during the night or the hour or so since the complete renovation.

The pesky stuff will fool you, even when you keep your lawn sheared to prevent growth to the seed-producing stage, by spreading low, hugging the ground and reaching out horizontal tentacles to bear seed. The Belgian hare is a piking breeder, a slave to Mrs. Sanger's hobby, compared with crab grass.

But some day I am going to have a garden without a spear of the darned stuff, even if I have to cement the whole expanse from fence to fence.

The only certain things in this world are death and taxes—AND CRAB GRASS!

Streamlined Savings

By Ernest K. Lindley

Dollars Are Stagnant

SOME EXTREMELY important facts about our economic situation were set forth this week by Thomas C. Blaisdell, jr., at the Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Virginia. Mr. Blaisdell is an inquiring economist who has been working in the background of the Roosevelt Administration for six years, and is now chief of the SEC studies concerning life insurance and investment for the TNEC, or Monopoly Investigation.

Mr. Blaisdell's topic was "Savings and Investment," which many economists believe to be the main center of our troubles. The greatest volume of unemployment is in the capital goods industries. These industries are moved into action by new investment. How to stimulate investment is the question which economists and politicians have been wrestling with for several years—and producing a hopeless confusion of answers.

Now, according to Mr. Blaisdell's figures, the capital goods industries in 1937 turned out 17.5 billion dollars worth of goods, as compared with 20.3 billion dollars worth in the banner year, 1929. In other words, as he said, "our rate of investment in 1937 was almost as high as at any previous time in our history."

STILL, IN 1937 we had eight or nine million unemployed, and our whole economic machine was working at far less than capacity.

Turning to the other side of the savings-investment problem, Mr. Blaisdell said that the data indicate that we are saving more of our national income than at any time since the World War.

Every dollar that is saved is a dollar drawn out of the economic stream. For every dollar that is saved a dollar must be put back, or the stream dwindles. When you save you take the dollar out, and when you invest you put the dollar back.

In earlier years we could put to use every dollar that was saved. Our industry was expanding rapidly. And as industry grew and great private fortunes sprang up, we saved more and more—for most of the saving was done by individuals with large incomes, and by corporations.

A few years ago the conservative economists of the Brookings Institution made an examination of our economy and reached the conclusion that even during the 1920s we had saved too much of our national income. The extra savings were used to pyramid securities on existing production, to bid up the prices of stocks, to finance foreign loans.

'Too Much' Of Income Believed Laid Away

THE IDEA that we have been saving too much national income is held by many economists, including some of the most influential in the Administration. An effort to cut down savings was made by increasing the taxes on large incomes. The undistributed profits tax, now jettisoned, was intended, among other things, to prevent excessive saving by corporations.

But, according to Mr. Blaisdell's figures, we are now saving a larger percentage of our national income than we saved even in the nineteen-twenties. This saving is becoming less and less a matter of individual thrift. It is becoming "increasingly automatic." It is done more and more by life insurance companies, business corporations, and, odd as it may seem, by the Federal, State and local governments. The assets of life insurance companies increased by 2.9 billion dollars between 1936 and 1938, and governmental trust and pension funds increased by 2.6 billions. Business corporations save by putting money aside for depreciation and depletion, as well as by failing to distribute all their net earnings.

"In short," as Mr. Blaisdell put it, "we now have a streamlined savings machine, a machine which operates quietly, automatically and painlessly, a machine increasingly independent of those conscious choices called thrift."

HOW CAN WE use the savings piled up by this streamlined machine? The biggest obvious outlet is in housing—that is where 1937 fell short of 1929. We can use a little in modernizing the railroads and in expanding and improving the electrical utilities. We can use some for modernizing and expanding industry—as we have been doing. But here we run across another interesting and important phenomenon. It corresponds to the technological unemployment of men. Improved manufacturing processes, more efficient machines, have reduced also the amount of capital that is needed to produce a given volume of goods.

We can use savings also in great public projects. Public construction is now back to the level of the middle twenties. The Federal Government is paying for more of it now, the State and local governments for less. Accordingly, it is the Federal Government which is going into debt these days, whereas in the twenties the State and local governments were expanding their debts.

But when all the present and prospective outlets for savings—including housing—are added together, we will still need more outlets, according to Mr. Blaisdell's estimates. We will either have to find those outlets or cut down on savings—or remain in a state of semi-depression, or worse. We can probably increase still more investments by the Government. But maybe not enough to put all our savings into the economic stream.

If we can't find enough investment outlets, then we will have to "consume" our excessive savings. That is, we will have to save less and shunt more of our aggregate income into direct consumption. Mr. Blaisdell was rather cautious about his forecasts, but he left no doubt that he thinks that is what we will have to do if we are going to get our economic machine to working at high speed and high capacity.

priations, however, has a different interpretation of the House action. He cannot agree to any increase in the lump sum appropriation, he said, unless the House reverses its attitude, thrice expressed.

"I hope this will be settled by Saturday night," he said, "but there's nothing I can do about it."

Senator Overton, meanwhile, was assured the full support of his colleagues after an executive conference, as he reiterated that the plight of District employes could not be blamed upon the Senate, which has yielded to the House in everything except the lump sum and on that has met the House halfway.

Glass Is Adamant

"There is no longer a free conference on this issue," Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, stated as he left the conference.

"I will not sign a conference report that goes below $6,500,000 and I have so informed Senator Overton."

Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, asserted that Overton has his full backing to stand pat against the ultimatum of the House.

"The House has tied the hands of its conferees," Overton said, "and, therefore, there is nothing to be gained by asking the Senate to agree to a new conference with the House until we can have a free conference.

"Furthermore, if the House were to have its way, $1,500,000 more in District revenue would have to be raised. That would require either very high income tax rates, which, in all probability, would not be acceptable either to the Senate or to the House or it would make it necessary to apply the tax to all Government employes who have been here for a definite period of time.

Answers Overton

Representative Collins, in answer to Overton's statement blaming the House for the impasse, cited what he termed a parliamentary precedent to the effect that the house which amends a bill is responsible for tying it up if no agreement can be reached in conference.

As all tax and appropriations bills originate in the House, Senate conferees pointed out, the effect of such a parliamentary rule would be that the Senate would be compelled to accept the measures as drafted by the House in instances of any serious dispute.

"That's too ridiculous even to discuss," commented one of the Senate managers.

Meanwhile, it was learned that one of the House conferees whose report on the tax bill was rejected by the House plans to address the lower chamber within a few days and call attention to the large Federal contributions received by States whose representatives are opposing the lump-sum increase.

Many of these States, he said, particularly Mississippi, South Dakota and Colorado, receive several times as much money from the Federal Government in the way of agricultural WPA, social security and other grants as the States pay into the United States Treasury in taxes.

Many District employes interviewed yesterday said they would draw money equivalent to their regular pay from their savings accounts. Others stated they would be "hard pressed" if no pay is available tomorrow.

H. A. Brooks, vice president of the Potomac Electric Power Co., explained his company would probably accept the situation as "reason enough" to waive the usual 10 per cent penalty for late payments.

Creditors to Wait

Robert C. Owers, vice president of the Washington Gas Light Co., said "we will do everything we can to alleviate any inconveniences" to the District employes.

Jeff Lichtenberg, attorney for most of the automobile finance companies, said "we won't bother" District employes who have notes due.

A check of the credit departments of local department stores disclosed there was "no worry" concerning collection on bills of District employes that are due tomorrow.

Real estate firms joined other business firms in the statement "we will wait."

This Would Stymie Mr. Newton—Cars, Water Run 'Uphill'

Leominster, Mass., July 13 (AP).—It may have been only an illusion, but thousands of motorists tonight felt they were getting something like a preview of the world of tomorrow when they drove to an outlying section of Leominster and let their cars "roll up hill."

They halted their cars at the bottom of an apparent 100-foot upgrade, then released brakes and were slowly "drawn up hill."

Some talked of a mysterious lodestone in the hill that drew the cars along, until others dumped cans of water in the middle of the grade and the water rolled "uphill" too.

friend of the downtrodden," Short shouted that "he sees to it that his kids don't marry any."

The library bill, said Short, violated precedent by establishing a memorial to a living man; but he added that the President is a precedent-breaker. "That," he said, "is the reason he has been campaigning for a third term ever since his inauguration for a first term."

Applause and Laughter

As soon as Short had finished, amidst the applause and laughter of the Republicans, Representative Coffee (Democrat), of Washington, jumped to his feet with the assertion that Short's attack was "decidedly disgraceful and out of place." The galleries applauded, but were brought to silence by the presiding officer, Representative Boehne (Democrat), of Indiana.

He warned the Republicans that their "diabolically vindictive jeremiads will rise up to haunt them" in the 1940 elections.

One Republican, however, came to the President's defense. Representative Burdick, of North Dakota, asserted that the Chief Executive, "more than any man, is responsible for our having a representative form of Government in the United States. If he's made mistakes, history will take care of it."

Prior to the final roll call, a motion to recommit the bill was defeated, 219-132. Offered by Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, one of the chief opponents of the library through a representative of President Roosevelt's own district.

The motion went down before a solid block of Democratic votes plus 11 Republicans.

The 11 were Cole, of Maryland; Gearhart, of California; Hall, of New York; Kunkel, of Pennsylvania; Burdick, Lemke, of North Dakota; Miller, of Connecticut; Pittenger, of Minnesota; Reece, of Tennessee; Welch, of California, and Wolverton, of New Jersey. The two Progressives, Farmer-Laborite and American Laborite also voted against recommittal.

"Beautiful and Generous Thing"

Representative Treadway (Republican), of Massachusetts, asserted that the only valid argument for the measure is "the personal aggrandizement of Franklin D. Roosevelt," while Majority Leader Rayburn retorted that the President "is doing a beautiful and a generous thing."

The original bill would have permitted a charge of 25 cents for admission to the Hyde Park grounds donated by the President to the Nation, as well as a 25-cent charge for admission to the library's exhibit rooms. On a motion by Treadway, indorsed by Rayburn, the grounds admission fee was eliminated.

A Republican effort to limit the Government's maintenance expenses to $12,000 per annum was defeated.

Payment Date Advanced

Following are other high lights of the social security bill passed yesterday and returned for conference with the House:

Lowering of old-age insurance eligibility requirements so as to double the number of persons 65 and over who will qualify for retirement payments January 1, 1940. Cost, $695,000,000 in 15 years.

Advancing two years the date for beginning old-age insurance payments to January 1, 1940.

Raising from $30 to $40 the aged needy pension limit which the Federal Government agrees to share in.

Benefits Liberalized

Liberalized old-age insurance benefits, with supplementary benefits added for aged wives, widows, children and aged dependent parents, and a total of 1,300,000 new persons added to both old-age insurance and unemployment insurance coverage.

Three-year postponement of any step-up in the present old-age insurance tax of 1 per cent each on worker and employer—at a three-year tax saving to both of $825,000,000.

Subjecting to unemployment insurance tax only the first $3,000 an employer pays an employe, at a tax saving to employers of $65,000,000 annually.

Increases all along the line in Federal grants to States for maternal and child health services, for crippled children, for vocational rehabilitation work and for public health work.

Elevator Man Travels Far, but Gets Nowhere

Traveling 12,614 miles without getting anywhere is the record established by Clarence Leach, of Clarence, Va., who yesterday celebrated his tenth anniversary as a static voyager.

Leach, elevator operator in the National Press Building, claims another palm in the fact that in his 10 years of vertical travel he is the only man in the 13-story building who never has hauled a President to the Press Club on the top floor. "And," he remarked, "that's a record."

Miriam Marks Addresses C.D.A.

Nation-wide measures to reach spiritually underprivileged persons, especially children, through summer religious schools, were described yesterday before the eighteenth biennial convention of the Catholic Daughters of America by Miss Miriam Marks, of this city.

Executive secretary of the National Center of the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine, she spoke in Detroit, Mich., citing the growing need for religious vacation schools and the participation of lay groups in furthering the work. She commended the Catholic daughters for their contribution since the foundation of the national department in 1935, as an assisting agency to the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine.

He was unreported after his take-off from Dryden, Tex., this morning. He will marry Miss Elizabeth Marvin Monday.

Pilsen Restricts Jews At Swimming Pools

Prague, July 13 (AP).—The police of Pilsen, famous brewing center, issued an order today forbidding Jews from bathing with non-Jews in public swimming pools. Special sections will be set apart for Jews. This is the first case of official action to separate Jews and non-Jews in the protectorate of Bohemia-Moravia.

A Right Restored

IT WAS nice of the Labor Relations Board to restore to American citizens who employ workmen their constitutional right to "petition the Government for redress of grievances," but a few more gracious concessions must be made before employers and workmen, both, may consider themselves safe from the tyranny of the board and the vicious dictatorships which the board has fostered in labor unions.

Employers still lack the right to speak freely—a right specifically granted by the Constitution, but suspended by the board with the casual high-handedness of a Soviet court deciding to knock off a handful of political dissenters—and Americans who prefer not to belong to labor unions and thus pay cash tribute out of their wages to the funds of the New Deal, the Spanish Communists or the Communists' conspiracy against the United States may be compelled to join up and pay or forfeit their right to work for a living in their own country.

Acts of Coercion Remain Uncurbed

AN ALIEN with hatred in his heart and soul for everything that is American, by subscribing to union policies and contributing to union funds, which then vanish into activities that strike at the American form of government, may acquire the power to vote away a native American's right to earn his living in a land for which he can be compelled to fight while the alien sits it out.

And the board has done nothing noticeable as yet to curb fiendish acts of coercion by which labor racketeers with a strike on their hands, even a strike manipulated solely for the extension of individual power, may terrorize the families of American citizens who stand on their right to retain their jobs. The employer may not even speak a word of sympathy to a persecuted American citizen who has the courage to oppose the union when a strike is on, for that would be a coercive attempt to influence the worker. But the union may throw rocks through the windows of his home, gang him on his way to and from work, beat his head off at the picket line, insult and maul his wife and terrorize his children, and, when the strike is won by such methods, may blackball him from his occupation for the rest of his life. That is fair union practice on the part of the union regardless of the individual's standing as a citizen, his record of service in his country's war or the contrast between his character and that of the unioneer in command of the machine or racket.

Employers' Rights Abolished by Decree

THE EFFRONTERY of the board in abolishing by dictatorial decree the employer's right to discuss union matters with men in his employ on the ground that he might be trying to coerce them has never been sufficiently appreciated. Here was an outright abrogation by a subdepartment of the Government of a right which the Government itself protects with the mad-eyed fury of an avenger when the complaint comes from the saboteur, and the abrogation of this right of American citizens in these circumstances has been followed by rulings that it was unfair labor practice on the part of an employer even to send an employe a document criticizing union tactics through James A. Farley's mails.

The union, however, may circulate among the employes the most scurrilous libels and misrepresentations of the facts of a controversy, with intent to influence them by a deceit or to whip them into submission by threats of terror. There is no established limit to the coercion that may be practiced on workmen by the union, and not even the faintest pretense has been made of an attempt to restrain promoters and closed-shop racketeers from the use of moral, physical and economic intimidation.

THE FAKE CRY that unioneers represent labor is accepted by the public with no really audible dissent, because those who refuse to join unions, or do join them under silent protest, have lacked a means of presenting their case. The employer and the labor faker can make themselves heard, but the persecuted individuals in the middle receive no hearing from the public and no respect from a Government board which was established for the frank purpose of assisting organized labor. Men who rebel at union extortions and job trusts and suffer from union politics have no protection from practices and rules which are no less ruthless than those which industry was accused of and equally destructive of their rights as American citizens.

These are a few little wrinkles in labor administration which might be ironed out before the Labor Relations Board can sit back and sprinkle itself with praise for guarding the sacred rights of labor.

Japan And Britain

By Mark J. Ginsbourg

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Twisting The Lion's Tail

Shanghai.

UNABLE to break the deadlock in her desperate struggle with China, Japan last month launched a determined offensive on British interests and nationals in this country.

There have been similar drives in the past. In 1935, when London sent Sir Frederick Leith-Ross to reorganize China's currency, the jingoist press in Tokyo vociferously demanded "positive action" against the British "Shylock." Late in 1937 the wounding of Sir Hugh Knatchbull-Hugessen, British Ambassador, by Japanese airmen and the shelling of British men-of-war on the Yangtze by Col. Kingoro Hashimoto, an ultra-reactionary, formed major episodes in another violent anti-British campaign.

Nothing seen in the past, however, has equaled in intensity or portent the new drive, the major manifestation of which was the blockade of the British Concession in Tienstsin.

THE INDIGNITIES heaped upon the hapless Britons in that city, as well as the much-publicized Japanese plans for dealing with the situation indicate that the Tientsin incident was but a link in a long chain of disputes deliberately provoked by the Japanese fighting services for reasons just emerging from the fog of Tokyo's threats, warnings and propaganda.

Evidence presented in the local British court during an inquest into the death of Mr. R. M. Tinkler, British employe of a British textile mill, at the hands of Japanese bluejackets on June 6, indicated that the strike, which led to the melee, was stage-managed by the Japanese themselves.

One of the eye-witnesses of the gruesome incident testified that a band of strikers was admitted to the British plant by Japanese bluejackets, who climbed over the fence and unbolted the main gate. The Japanese navy here had previously given a solemn pledge to protect the mills from rowdies, organized and directed by Nipponese agents.

Another foreign witness had intimated that the Japanese made no attempt to guard or disarm the band, which subsequently made an abortive attack on the power plant of the mill.

The treatment accorded to the Japanese-sponsored labor unrest by the press in Japan was revelatory of the course Tokyo apparently intends to follow in its war on foreign interests in general and on British in particular.

Thus, the local correspondent of the authoritative Osaka Mainichi reported to his paper on June 8 that "the strike of the Chinese employes of the Lun Chong cotton mill (where Mr. Tinkler was killed) has spread to the workers of many British factories and has developed into a general movement for boycotting British goods."

The strike, the correspondent predicted, "is not likely to see an early settlement and while at first the strikers sought an increase in wages, they are now demanding a general betterment of their working conditions . . ."

IT IS, of course, obvious that no parades, strikes or boycotts could have taken place in the Japanese-occupied territory without the army's consent. In addition to Shanghai, anti-British propaganda has already made its appearance in all parts of the seized territory, notably in the Shanghai-Nanking area and in Tientsin. A few days ago, Japanese agents were seen haranguing Chinese workers in the northern port into storming the British Concession.

The "Hsin Min Hui," the Japanese-controlled "party" in North China, whose chairman, significantly, is an official specially imported by the Japanese army from Manchuria, has launched a campaign of its own. Among the colorful slogans employed by the "party's" agents were, "Do not deal with British shops and banks! Take back the concession! To fight and down the National Government we must defeat Britain first! British merchants are squeezing our blood and flesh!"

The official Japanese Domei News Agency reported from Tientsin that "in collaboration with the Japanese authorities" in the city, the puppet mayor had made plans for a popular movement "to impeach the attitude of the British Concession authorities in disregarding the new situation in the Far East."

These inspiring slogans and declarations, it is interesting to note, bore a striking resemblance to resolutions passed at a mass meeting staged in Tokyo early in June under the auspices of the ultra-reactionary and powerful China Affairs Institute.

THE MEETING, called to denounce "triple intervention" in China, passed resolutions attacking Britain, France and the United States for aiding China, landing bluejackets in Kulangsu and blocking Japan's exalted mission in east Asia, and demanding the conclusion of a military alliance with the European totalitarian powers. Among the resolutions was one urging the Japanese government to seize foreign concessions in China.

If other evidence were needed of Japan's new efforts to squeeze Britain out of China one had but to point to the arrest and long detention of Lieut. Col. C. R. Spear, British military attache, on ridiculous charges; the boarding of the S. S. Ranpura and the reported organization by the Japanese army's dreaded special service section of anti-British associations in Kiangsu, Shantung, Anhwei and Honan provinces.

In the cities of Pengpu and Anking, British goods have been burned at well-attended meetings, while at a Japanese-ordered mass rally in the city of Hsuchow on April 23, the thoroughly frightened demonstrants sang a song proclaiming that "since the opium war Britain has been forcing us to pay an indemnity and open treaty ports, but we shall stop Britain from penetrating China, we shall strengthen our anti-British stand."

IT WOULD be erroneous to believe that the current campaign is directed solely against Britain. For the first time since the commencement of the hostilities two years ago, anti-American sentiment—obviously with official inspiration—is finding its way into Japanese press comments, jingoist speeches and official utterances.

The occupation of the British and French concessions in Tientsin would, thus, gravely harm not only the British and French interests involved, but also all other foreign cultural and business enterprises operating in North China. The export restrictions imposed by the Japanese four months ago in an attempt to assist the new puppet currency affected American traders as much as they did British or French.

The burning of British goods in the interior, sponsored by the Japanese army, is being accompanied by an extensive campaign to promote, and often compel, purchases of Nippon-made commodities. Naturally, American goods suffer from such bayonet-backed competition as much as British.

Orders recently issued by puppet authorities in central China to ship no cargoes in foreign bottoms were applied with utter impartiality to all merchantmen save the Japanese, which today freely advertise freight and passenger services up the Yangtze River as far as Hankow.

WHILE THE blow was felt hardest by British shipping companies, the Japanese naval order closing nine important coastal ports to foreign shipping seriously affected other shipping concerns as well. The grounds for the order were that foreign vessels were carrying military supplies to guerrillas.

While the Japanese have been tightening their stranglehold on foreign cultural, missionary and economic interests in China ever since the commencement of the hostilities two years ago, the new campaign has never been paralleled in severity or the absurdity of grounds offered for the new restrictions.

The goal of the new campaign of xenophobia can only be surmised at this time. The most logical explanation is that the Japanese government and army, unable to produce any more victories over China, have decided to bolster Japanese morale by deliberately provoking tension with foreign powers.

Health Curb On Marriage Is Debated

Some Alexandrians Doubt Legality of Ordinance to Go In Effect Aug. 11

The Washington Post Bureau,
507 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Temple 3767
Delivery Service, Phone Alex. 247.

Legality of the recently passed city ordinance requiring a physician's certificate of health as a prerequisite to the issuance of a marriage license is being hotly questioned.

City council passed the ordinance June 27. It was published July 12, to be effective August 11, or 30 days after publication.

Mayor Richard L. Ruffner is an attorney and chairman of the Alexandria Health Board, the group that instituted the movement and drafted the terms of the ordinance. City Manager Carl L. Budwesky is also an attorney and formerly city attorney, and the present city attorney is Armistead L. Boothe. They conferred frequently while framing the ordinance and studied the city charter, and in the opinion of all three the measure does not conflict with any State statute and is legal.

City Attorney Boothe said yesterday the city as an added precaution may apply to the circuit court for a declaratory judgement before the ordinance goes into effect. According to Boothe, the clerk of the coudt functions as a State officer and in issuing a marriage license he is carrying out a State law. The question is whether the city has a right to require the clerk of the court to impose a condition not covered by the State law governing the issuance of licenses.

A significant fact is that at the last session of the State Legislature a law was introduced paralelling this city ordinance, but lost by a narrow margin.

The ordinance provides that when any person applies to the Clerk of the Corporation Court of Alexandria for a license for a marriage, he or she shall supply the said clerk with a certificate signed by a reputable physician stating that the parties to the proposed marriage are free from infectious, contagious or communicable diseases, including venereal diseases and tuberculosis.

The new ordinance has 14 sections governing health conditions in the city, and it further provides that should any section, clause or provision be declared by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, the same shall not affect the validity of the ordinance as a whole, or any part thereof other than the part so declared to be invalid.

Apartments Robbed

Three apartments in the John Tyler section of Presidential Gardens Apartments were robbed Wednesday evening while the occupants were away, and property to the amount of $575 taken. In each case the front door of the apartment was forced.

Loot included a quantity of jewelry, and four gold certificates of the Raeburn Coal Co., valued at $100.

Street Work Proceeds

Surface treatment of Washington avenue from King street to Oak street has been completed, according to City Engineer H. G. McCartney.

The city engineering department is now improving with a gravel surface roadway and curb and gutter, one square on Green street, between Washington and St. Asaph streets. The work is being done at the expense of the abutting property owners, and will cost approximately $2,100.

Prince Georges Group Against D. C. Fund Cut

Prince Georges County Municipal Association, meeting at Riverdale last night, voted down a resolution favoring curtailment of Federal appropriations to the District of Columbia.

The resolution, introduced by H. Wilson Spicknall, of Hyattsville, recommended that no Federal appropriations be made to the District except to supplement a real estate tax proportionate to that of other cities.

Cites Higher Tax Rate

Spicknall claimed Prince Georges County was unable to keep as low a tax rate as Washington because of the Capital's financial assistance from the Government. This, he said, made the county less attractive for home seekers.

G. I. Hightower, of District Heights, opposed the resolution, and pointed to the educational privileges which Washington affords to many county children.

Dolby Re-elected

Bird H. Dolby, of Mount Rainier, was re-elected president of the association. Other officers chosen were Vincent A. Osterman, of Bladensburg, first vice president; Mayor John N. Torvestad of Colmar Manor, second vice president; J. P. Kohler, of District Heights, secretary-treasurer.

The association recessed until the second Thursday in September, when it will meet at the Colmar Manor Municipal Building.

Arlington Health Staff Keeps Pace With County's Rise

DR. RALPH G. BEACHLEY

Beachley Aided by Assistant, 4 Nurses, 4 Sanitary Inspectors, Full-Time Dentist, 8 Clinicians, 2 Secretaries

Little Arlington, third smallest county in the United States, has absorbed something more than people, traffic and city ways from her sprawling neighbor across the Potomac.

In the last 20 years of amazing growth and development, she has acquired with her population, expanding incredibly, all the responsibilities of metropolitanism. At the same time, she has retained so much of the rural spaciousness inherited from her agrarian past that these responsibilities bear upon her from two directions.

Especially true is this in matters of health. So large a part of her population lives the double life of the commuter, half at home in the country and half at work in the city, that it bears the ills of both while enjoying the advantages of both.

Large Health Staff

To meet this problem, Arlington County has developed, under the county manager form of government, one of the most complete full-time health dpeartments in the United States. This departmnt is under supervision of Dr. Ralph G. Beachley, who went there in May, 1938, from the Virginia State Health Department, where he was deputy director of rural health.

Working with him in his never-ending fight against disease are an assistant health officer, four public health nurses, four sanitary inspectors, a full-time school dentist, eight part-time clinicians and two secretaries.

Equipment is complete and modern. At Arlington Courthouse is a central health office with a clinic, and four health centers are located in strategic points. One of these centers is equipped with X-ray and fluoroscopic apparatus for chest examinations and a complete clinical laboratory recently has been placed in operation.

Reduction in Disease

Communicable diseases are reported to the health officer, whose duty it is to make a prompt investigation and suggest quarantine and isolation measures. A reduction was noted in communicable diseases during 1938.

Special efforts now are being made in the control of pneumonia. Through "typing" facilities of the laboratory, physicians discover the particular kind of pneumonia germ causing the disease, and the proper serum admbinistered.

The health department distributes certain biological products, including Schick testing, toxoid and antitoxin used in diphtheria control measures, smallpox vaccine, the Pasteur treatment in suspected cases of rabies, and tuberculin testing material. More recently, drugs for treating syphilis have been available for distribution.

Arlington County is the only one in Virginia having a full-time school dentist. Dr. T. W. Pumphrey is in charge of this work.

During the summer children are examined to discover and remedy correctible defects prior to entrance in school. This is known as the Summer Round-Up. Co-operating with the Parent-Teacher Associations, the department arranges for clinics.

Social leaders of the fraternity of cattle fathers are Piebe Laura Ollie Homestead King, Hazelwood Korndyke Gerben and Aaggie 3d's Wayne Paul DeKol, as well as other prominent gentlemen just too, too uppercrust to mingle with the plain old red bulls which scare the wits out of little boys crossing fields en route to the "old swimming hole."

Collision and Sinking Of Fishing Boat Probed

Baltimore, July 13 (AP).—The Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation called for written reports of skippers of two fishing boats which collided near Sharp's Island last night, sinking the Beulah.

Capt. Glendy Larrimore, of the Stanley V. which rammed the Beulah amidships, reported he towed the Beulah to shallow water and took off Capt. John Berridge and his four passengers without incident.

Area Chairmen Appointed for Chest Campaign

Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, is among the area chairmen named yesterday by Donald L. Chamberlin, head of the suburban unit for the Community Chest. Dr. Byrd will lead the drive in Prince Georges County, Md.

Others who will lead the Chest campaign in sections near Washington include Lawrence M. Proctor, of Falls Church, Va., who has accepted the chairmanship for Fairfax County, Va. Last year Proctor was vice chairman for Fairfax County, and in previous drives has served as district chairman.

Newly appointed Judge Stedman Prescott, of the Sixth Judicial Circuit of Montgomery and Frederick Counties will be head of the seliciting groups for Montgomery County. Serving him as area secretary will be Edward M. Ott, staff member of the Social Service League for Montgomery.

In Alexandria, R. Samuel Luckett will be chairman for the drive in that community. He has previously served as division chairman.

Montgomery Deputy Faces Beer Trial

Karslake Charged With Selling Without a License At His Lunchroom

BUREAU OF THE POST,
8313 Clark Ave., Silver Spring, Md.
Telephone SHepherd 4300.

Montgomery County Police yesterday arrested Deputy Sheriff William H. Karslake on charges of selling beer without a license in his lunch room on the Frederick pike near Hyattstown. Karslake was released on bond of $500 for a hearing July 25 at Rockville before Trial Magistrate Donald A. DeLashmutt.

The Clarksburg district, in which Karslake's lunch room is located, is dry territory. His store formerly was the county liquor dispensary building until the district voted dry.

Three of the county's new policemen were dispatched to the establishment in plain clothes. Two ordered beer and allege that they were served. The third did not drink any of the beer. The precaution was taken because the last time Karslake was arrested he accused the arresting policeman of driving under influence of beer and was acquitted. Karslake is a part-time deputy sheriff.

Boy Missing

Rockville—Montgomery County police yesterday were asked to look for Kenneth F. Stubbs, jr., 16, of Rockville, who disappeared from his home Wednesday. The boy is 5 feet 8 inches in height, weighs 130 pounds, has brown eyes and was wearing a blue sport shirt and brown slacks. He also wore white shoes with brown tips and a white sailor hat.

Achievement Day

Rockville—The annual achievement day of the Montgomery County 4-H Girls Clubs was held yesterday at Rockville. Prize winners will represent the county at the statewide club day at the University of Maryland. The girls modeled dresses they made in schools conducted by Miss Edythe M. Turner, county home demonstration agent, and her secretary, Mrs. Harry S. Beall. Talks were given by Miss Jessie Hinton, home management specialist of the University of Maryland Extension Service, and Mrs. Orville Scoville, president of the Montgomery County Council of Homemakers Clubs.

Winners were:

School dress, 10 to 14 years—Betty Jean King, of Cedar Grove Club; 15 years and over—Marion Linthicum, Germantown Club; cotton sports dress—Nellie Craver, Sunshine Club; spectator sports dress—Betty Bryan, Somerset; wool dress—Lois Gish, Somerset; coat and suit—Elizabeth Shephard, Somerset; dress, cotton, silk or linen, 10 to 20 years—Ellen Nash, Sunshine; junior party dress, 12 to 14—Louise Watkins, Germantown; informal party dress, 10 to 21—June Barnse, Conduit road.

Exhibition baking—butter cake—Elizabeth Daniel, Dickerson; baking powder biscuits—Emily Wachter, Sunshine.

Sunday Law Case

Bethesda.—Trial of two men charged with violation of the Sunday blue law prohibiting work on Sunday was continued yesterday by Trial Magistrate James C. Christopher to await summoning of county policemen who made the arrest.

The men, Hezzy West and James Royce, both of Glen Echo, were charged with hammering and other work on Royce's house. Complaining witnesses were Miss Mary Allan Hood, Robert Hood and Mrs. Hood, mother of Miss Hood. The Hoods complained that they saw the men working on the house.

West told the court the arrest was in retaliation because he had shot the Hood dog for killing his chickens in the morning. Several defense witnesses said the only work done was by West, who sawed a board in two, to test a new saw.

Held for Grand Jury

Rockville.—Charles Coupard and Bernard Day, both of Rockville, yesterday were held for action of the grand jury by Trial Magistrate Donald A. DeLashmutt, on charges of robbery of James T. Beane, 72, the night of July 2. Beane told the judge that Day hit him on the head and took his pocketbook containing $61. All three lived in a house owned by Day.

Reinwall Unopposed as Head Of Maryland Firemen's Group

Easton Man Named, Lonaconing Chosen For Next Session

Ocean City, Md., July 13.—Percy S. T. Reinwall, president of the Eastern Fire Department, was nominated without opposition today as president of the Maryland State Firemen's Association in convention here.

Lonaconing was announced as the 1940 convention city, and the convention head, John B. Gontrum, insurance commissioner, otulined a program to reduce fire losses in the State.

Other officers nominated included R. Allen Baker, Hyattsville, first vice president; Hiram D. Musgrove, Bethesda, second vice president; Irving W. Johnson, Takoma Park, and Benjamin R. Benson 3d, Cockeysville, secretary; Herbert A. Urie, Rock Hall, and Elmer S. Knight, Frostburg, treasurer; Roy L. Morgan, Annapolis, incumbent; Marc Bryan, Denton, and Charles Minker, Perryville, trustees, and the Rev. James W. Minter, Baltimore, chaplain.

Two Amendments Slated

The association scheduled a vote on two by-law amendments: (1) To strike out a provision for $10 a month for indigent firemen; (2) to limit the trustees' term to five years.

Firemen joined the auxiliary this morning for a memorial service.

Gontrum outlined a fire loss reduction campaign based on inspection, education, investigation and regulation. He satid he would name deputy fire marshals to carry out the campaign if the association approved his suggestions.

Gontrum urged a State-wide inspection of all public buildings; an educational campaign through schools and civic organizations; increased investigation of suspicious fires and vigorous prosecution for arson; enforcement of the laws relating to storage of inflammable materials and explosives.

Byrd Lauds School

President H. C. Byrd of the University of Maryland tonight told Maryland volunteer firemen their educational program had been outstandingly successful.

PERCY S. T. REINWALL

Byrd reviewed the establishment of courses for volunteer firemen at the university ten years ago. Some 200 attended annually until October 1, 1937, when extension courses were added.

Byrd declared the educational courses, "probably, as a result of the increase in knowledge as to fire fighting and property protection," have saved at least $500,000 since they were established.

"Furthermore, the knowledge we have gained of the protection of people, of life and protection against injuries, have resulted in immesurable benefits, because not only have we these dollars and cents values involved in human time, but also the satisfaction of work well done and the protection of people from suffering.

"You deserve a place of honor among those that render great public service," Byrd concluded.

Liquor Board Orders Pay Cuts After Virginia Sales Decrease

Richmond, Va., July 13 (AP).—The State Liquor Board reported today that the volume of sales in 18 of its 90 stores declined during the 12 months ended May 31 to such an extent as to drop their personnel into lower salary clasifications.

Volume at six stores, on the other hand, increased, and the personnel in some of these dispensaries will receive pay boosts. During the previous year 10 stores showed decreases and 12 increases.

Salaries of store managers, assistant managers and clerks are based on the average number of bottles sold during the preceding year. There are eight classifications with salaries for managers and asisstant managers beginning at $125 and $110, respectively, for stores handling less than 5,000 bottles per month, and ranging upward to $225 and $200 for managers and assistant managers and $135 for clerks in stores handling 40,000 bottles and over per month.

The revised classifications, effective July 1, involve total decreases in salaries of $750 a month and increases of $205, or a net decrease of $545 in a monthly store payroll of approximately $50,000.

Since all the salaries amount to more than $1,000 a year, changes are effective only with the approval of the Governor. The revisions for the present fiscal year were based on the numbers handled in the period from June 1, 1938, to May 31, 1939.

Stores reporting decreases during that period were Richmond, Third and Clay streets, East Main street and Williamsburg avenue; Norfolk, 101 West Main street, Princess Anne road and 1751 Church street; Portsmouth, 619 High street; Roanoke, 102 Salem avenue; Lynchburg, 612 Main street; Charlottesville, 421 East Main street; Petersburg, Harrison street; Suffolk; Waynesboro; Emporia; Danville, Main street and Union street; Kenbridge, and South Norfolk.

These showing increases were Gate City, Grundy, Caingsteague, Urbana; Roanoke, 109 West Salem avenue, and Richmond's Church Hill Store.

17 Fires in June

Arlington.—The report of County Fire Chief A. C. Scheffel, released yesterday by County Manager Frank C. Hanrahan, shows a total of 17 fires in June, with a loss of $590. Of these six were house fires, one electric pole, two business property, four automobiles and four grass blazes. An average of 12 firemen responded to each call. There were 31 calls for the county ambulance.

13 Per Cent of Taxes Uncollected

Arlington. — Charles T. Jesse, county treasurer, yesterday said records in his office show that of the tax levy for real estate and public service, amounting to $875,106.69, and personal property, amounting to $133,419.94, totaling $1,008,526.63 for 1938. The books show all but $110,182.82 of real estate and public service taxes and $30,805.22 of personal property collected. This shows only 13.98 per cent of the total still due, or 12.59 per cent of real estate and public service and 23.09 per cent of personal property taxes.

For the year 1937 the tax levy for real estate and public service amounted to $802,568.71, and personal property, $117,002.72, totaling $919,574.43. The records show that all but 14.82 per cent of real estate and public service taxes were collected and 24.96 per cent of personal property taxes collected.

Prince Georges Board Suspends Beer License

The Prince Georges County Board of License Commissioners yesterday suspended the beer license of James Edward Wood, Upper Marlboro tavern-keeper, for 60 days on complaints of residents of the territory.

The complaints alleged that patrons of the tavern were boisterous and disorderly.

Licenses were granted to the following applicants:

Charles C. Stuart, secretary-treasurer of Stuart, Inc., Colmar Manor, beer, wine and liquor, off sale.
Amelia A. Sibert, University Inn, Berwyn, beer on sale.
Olive Dove, Duley's Store, Rosarrville, beer on sale.
Jacqueline E. Hindle, Earl's Crab House, TB, beer on sale.
Henry W. Grimes, Kuke's Corner, Brandywine road and Eagle Harbor road, beer on sale.

Fiscal Year Issue Vexes Prince Georges

Assessment Head Puzzled as to When Official Period Begins

Prince Georges County has its fiscal problem as well as the District.

Thomas W. Baxter, Prince Georges County supervisor of assessments, is seeking a clever lawyer to solve the problem of what constitutes the county's tax year.

In reply to numerous inquiries, as to whether the tax year dated from January 1, April 1 or July 1, Baxter said yesterday he has to admit he doesn't know. He summed up the situation as follows:

"The county tax year cannot begin January 1, because we asses property up to March 31. The county tax year cannot begin July 1 because we must lay our levy before the second Monday in April, and I understand an ordinance levying a tax must be passed within the fiscal year for which the levy is made. If I am right on this, the only date left for the beginning of our taxable year would be April 1. But title companies and attorneys pro rate taxes as of January 1."

In 1934, Baxter said, the commissioners adopted the calendar year as the county's tax year. This corresponded with the State's tax year and clarified the muddle. The next year this order was revoked and substitute legislation was enacted, which provided that:

"The County Commissioners shall lay their annual levy for State and County taxes on or before the second Monday in April in each and every calendar year and for the purpose of fixing the taxable basis of all property for said tax levy for Prince Georges County, all property acquired since the 31st day of March of the preceding calendar year and up to and including the 31st day of March in the year in which such annual levy is made, shall be included in the taxable basis for such year."

This legislation, Baxter said, "placed us in a deeper muddle than we were before."

Varied Uses of Lobster In Post Prize Recipes

Mrs. Ireland Wins First Award With Sophisticated Dish; Man Gives Formula For Cooking Live Sea Denizen

By Martha Ellyn,
The Post Food Editor.

"PERHAPS you were never introduced to a lobster, so you have no idea what a delightful thing a lobster quadrille is," were the words of Gryphon to Alice in Wonderland. We introduce our reader to the rosy-shelled lobster by way of the five winning recipes of this week's Post recipe contest.

When the mercury goes up some foods seem less appealing. There's nothing like a broiled lobster split and ready for vast quantities of butter to whet the appetite, but anyone of the following lobster recipes will dramatize a meal.

Sophisticated Version

Mrs. Mary Graham Ireland, 719 Third street northeast, is not superstitious over the combination of lobster and milk, and does not uphold the fallacy that it is dangerous—if not fatal—to eat lobster and drink milk in the same meal. The recipe, Lobster Marguery, submitted by Mrs. Ireland wins the first award of $3.

Mrs. Ireland

Lobster Marguery

Melt ½-cup butter in top of double boiler. Add ¼-cup flour and blend. Add 2-3 cup bottled milk or 1-3 cup evaporated milk and 1-3 cup water and 1 1-3 cups cream and cook until smooth and thick. Add 2 teaspoons each of Worcestershire sauce, lemon juice, sherry, and parmesan cheese; a dash of cayenne pepper and 3 cups cooked lobster meat. Place over low heat until ready to serve. Just before serving, pour over 3 well-beaten egg yolks and blend thoroughly. Reheat quickly and serve at once. Serves 6 to 8. For a company dinner serve with buttered peas, buttered string beans and mushrooms, hot rolls and lemon ice. Tomato juice makes an interesting first course.

Man's Interpretation

"You have heard of Lobster Thermidor. My recipe for this week's contest is Lobster Frigidor," writes Earle Wesley Richardson, 1914 I street northwest, winner of the second prize of $2.

Mr. Richardson

"I am glad lobster is the theme for this week's contest as I am very fond of sea food. It is right down my alley. As far back as the Roman Empire, lobster was considered a great luxury and delicacy. Lobsters are still delectable and no more expensive than a good steak. A live lobster should be cooked at once. A lobster that goes into boiling water with his eyes up and his claws straining for the cook's fingers, dies with a flavor in his meat so superior that few can imagine who have never eaten one. When you cook one have enough boiling water in kettel to cover lobster. Add 2 teaspoons salt to each quart of water. Take lobster by back and drop it in head first. Cover, let boil hard for 5 minutes, then reduce heat and simmer for half-hour.

Lobster Frigidor

"Soften 1½ tablespoons gelatin in ½ cup cold water, then dissolve in ½ cup boiling water. Add 1 tablespoon lemon juice and mix thoroughly. Combine 1 cup shredded lobster, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon paprika, 1 tablespoon chopped olives, ½ cup each of chopped celery and green peppers, and ¾ cup mayonnaise. Turn into lobster mold and chill. (An oval gravy boat will do.) Unmold on crisp lettuce and brush with a little red vegetable coloring to make the lobster look as natural as possible. Decorate with lobster claws and legs putting them in their natural positions. Serve with side dish of mayonnaise."

Fish Shortcake

There's always something new under the sun when it comes to cooking. Take the Lobster Asparagus Shortcake recipe submitted by Mrs. B. C. Phillips, 631 Allison street northwest, and develop it and you will agree that it deserves a prize of $1.

Mrs. Phillips

Lobster Asparagus Shortcake

Melt 3 tablespoons butter. Blend in 3 tablespoons flour and ½ teaspoon dry mustard, ¾ teaspoon salt and dash of pepper. Gradually add 2 cups of milk, stirring until thick and smooth, about 10 minutes. Add 2 cups fresh or canned lobster meat and ½ pimiento minced, and keep hot in top of double boiler. Heat a No. 2 can of asparagus. Serve by arranging asparagus stalks over large hot buttered biscuits. Serve lobster mixture over this. Serves 6.

Molded Sea Food

A Maine lobster is one of the most favored of the sea denizens. When prepared according to the recipe of Miss Dorothy E. Hayford, Haymarket, Va., delivered from its mold and ensconced on a platter with attractive garnishment, one can readily understand why Miss Haywood won a prize of $1.

Miss Hayford

Maine Lobster Loaf

Pick lobster meat to obtain 2 cupfuls. Do not cut as that will toughen it. Add ½ cup cracker crumbs, rolled very fine, ½ cup sweet cream, ½ teaspoon chopped chives and 3 hard-cooked eggs chopped fine. Add salt and pepper to taste. Add softened butter, a piece the size of an egg and blend well. Put into mold and put a weight over it. Set in refrigerator for several hours. Cut in slices and serve on hearts of lettuce or water cress. Garnish with tiny rings of stuffed olives or sweet pickles. This is a splendid way to use small lobsters and can be prepared in the morning and ready for use later in the day.

Foreign Accent

Miss Sylvia Klein, Procurement Division, Treasury Department, is the winner of a $1 prize with her recipe, Casserole of Lobster in Sour Cream. Miss Klein writes that this dish has a delicious foreign flavor.

Miss Klein

Lobster in Sour Cream

Cut 2 pounds of lobster into pieces about 2 inches long. Brown in 2 tablespoons butter, in heavy frying pan. Remove lobster to casserole. Blend flour into drippings in frying pan. Add 3 tablespoons water and dash of paprika, stirring until smooth. Add 1 cup sour coffee cream slowly, stirring constantly. Cook slowly until thickened. Remove from heat and add 1 two-ounce can mushrooms, 1 tablespoon onion juice and 1 teaspoon salt. Pour over lobster in casserole; cover and bake 1 hour or until lobster is tender, in slow oven, 275 degrees. Serves 6 people.

Upside Down Cold Ham Loaf Good for Hot Weather Menu

Jellied Meats Also Easy to Serve And Appetizing; Many Combinations Of Meats and Vegetables Are Possible

By The Post Food Editor

THE MEAT DISH should be revamped when the hot days of summer seem too hot to handle. An Upside Down Ham Loaf, made in the cool of the morning from the last shreds of meat clinging to a ham bone, will have its rewards when served cold at the dinner hour.

Meats may also be jellied into attractive trembling molds. There are many appetizing combinations. Tongue and spinach loaf is one—buy the tongue sliced if you don't want to cook one, hold it together with aspic gelatin and when almost firm, press tiny, curly leaves of spinach into the center of the aspic and around the sides so they curl slightly over the edge of the pan, so as to make a green ruffle when the loaf is unmolded on the serving platter.

Tuna fish makes a splendid jellied loaf, too, and costs but little. Set the fish with lemon-flavored gelatin, first mixing it with celery, pimientoes, green peppers and onion juice. Cayenne and horseradish are also good to use. There is a new pack of tuna that comes already shredded and it's a time saver, packed already into loaves, sandwiches and salads.

The ham loaf made by the following recipe may be served hot with scalloped potatoes. It is also easy to carry for a picnic, or may be served at home cold sliced.

Upside Down Ham Loaf

Mix together 2 cups ground ham (leftover), 1½ pounds ground fresh pork, 1 cup cracker crumbs, 2 eggs slightly beaten, 1 cup milk, ½ teaspoon salt and ⅛ teaspoon pepper. Grease a large rectangular bread pan generously and pour into a mixture made from ¾ cup brown sugar, 1 teaspoon mustard and ¼ cup vinegar over the bottom. On this press 6 slices of pineapple with a maraschino cherry in the center and between each slice. Over this spread the meat, packing in place. Bake in a 400-degree oven for 1½ hours. This amount will serve 6 generously.

ONE of the largest crops in years. The trees are loaded, causing sizes to run small. Pound for pound, however, this small fruit yields as much juice as the large and for juice purposes represents a much better value. The color and flavor of the juice is all that could be desired and, of course, you know the health value of pure orange juice.

Using a regular glass fruit reamer we squeezed out 2½ pints from 5 pounds. Think of it! That's 5 big 8-ounce water glasses or 10 of the usual 4-ounce size for 23c. Where can you find a better value in health?

Foreign Issues May Split U. S., Rabbi Warns

Institute Told Creeds Must Treat Each Other as Americans

By the Associated Press

Charlottesville, Va., July 13.—Rabbi Morris S. Lazaron, of Baltimore, asserted today that religious groups of the Nation, if they are to serve themselves and America, "must not make the situation abroad the basis" of thought or action toward each other or toward American policy, internal or international.

"We live in America," said Rabbi Lazaron, member of the executive board of the National Conference of Jews and Christians, in an address before the University of Virginia's Institute of Public Affairs. "We do not live in Germany, Spain, Mexico, Russia, Poland or Ireland.

Deplores "Islands"

"If we are going to be pressed by Jews because of their feelings about Italy or Germany or Palestine or England or Poland; if we are going to be pressed by Catholics to adopt a policy because of their feelings about Spain or Russia or Mexico or Ireland; by Protestants because of their feelings about Quebec or Spain or Italy or Mexico or Russia—if these feelings which run deep are to color our attitude toward each other, and if we are to catch the wires that tug at us from abroad and we yield to their pull—we shall tear this Nation apart."

Rabbi Lazaron declared "we can do what we may to relieve" the stricken and the suffering and the oppressed, but "Gold help us if we cultivate here in America islands of loyalty to powers and interests other than American, and give them the sanction of religion."

"They who do this," he continued, play into the hands of the dictators, whose law of war is divide and conquer. Rather must be have active opposition in the ranks of religion against such influences."

Security and Freedom

On the same program, Dr. Frank Kingdon, president of the University of Newark, told the institute "freedom is a corrollary of security" and "we want security so that we may have freedom for self expression and from fear."

"This has been demonstrated," he declared, "in the nations that have turned away from democracy. In Germany and Italy the demand for economic security, both individually and collectively, has led to the eclipse of freedom in the exaltation of the state as the guarantor of security."

Kingdon expressed a belief the synthesis "that will bring the major possible degree of security locally along with the maximum security to the world at large" lies "through the extension of the practice of freedom."

Circuit Judge John Stuart Is Dead at 79

Retired Va. Jurist Was a Brother of Former Governor

By the Associated Press

Abingdon, Va., July 13.—Judge John James Stuart, 79, presiding judge of the Washington-Smyth County Judicial Circuit from 1924 until 1934, died at his home here today. He had been in ill health for several years.

Judge Stuart, a brother of the late former Governor Henry C. Stuart, was born April 15, 1860, at Saltville, in Smyth County. He was a nephew of Maj. Gen. J. E. B. Stuart of the Confederate Army.

He attended Marion Academy at Marion, 1873-75, and Emory and Henry College, 1875-81, where he was graduated with the degree of B.A. Later he studied law at the University of Virginia. Admitted to the bar in 1883, he began the practice of law at Abingdon and had resided here since.

In 1893 Judge Stuart was appointed Assistant United States Attorney for the Western District of Virginia by President Cleveland, a post he held until 1897.

He was elected by the General Assembly as judge of the Twenty-third judicial circuit, embracing Washington and Smyth counties and the city of Bristol, in 1924. He retired from that position in 1934 because of ill health.

WPA Models For Visual Aid Go on Display

Everything Shown From Saber-Toothed Tigers To Lumber Camps

While controversy rocks the WPA, an exhibition of WPA minature models intended for the use of school children is being installed quietly on the ground floor of the sedate National Museum. Mrs. Katherine Smith of the museum staff is still busy shifting the models about to show them off to the best advantage. The show, which includes a lot of things that even Alice didn't see in Wonderland, has everything—from scale-sized saber toothed tigers to lumber camps you can pick up and carry under your arm. That is, if the guard isn't looking.

Thousands of white-collar workers in 32 States have contributed to the exhibition of "visual aids" which are used in schools to supplement textbook material. The pieces are shipped around from place to place as requests are received for their use.

The Pennsylvania unit has more than 80 models at the museum illustrating the history of housing. From caves to Venetian palaces, to feudal castles, each one began with an architect's drawing. Then a wooden reproduction was put together and from this "carbon copies" were made in plaster.

The collection of game fish, also in plaster, are the only items in the show that aren't pocket editions. Actual fish were dipped in plaster for the reproductions, and numerous duplicates were produced.

A group of prehistoric animals, including a "giant" sloth, are of rubber, with a California label.

California also contributed numerous pieces to the exhibition's history of transportation. Along with Missouri and Kansas, it sent on to Mrs. Smith small-sized bicyles, aircraft, canoes, trains and ships. The Golden Gate Bridge is a matter of inches instead of thousands of feet at the WPA show.

From Maryland comes the throne room of the Kings of Crete who ruled the Mediterranean around 1500 B. C.; the Arch of Titus; and Babylon's Ishtar Gate.

There's even a rattlesnake, which can be taken apart to show just how it bites; and there's a miniature lumber camp with a sawmill, logs and a railroad.

Flying Family Is Back From Hop To 25 Countries

Lieut. Col. George R. Hutchinson, red-haired father of Janet Lee and Katherine Hutchinson of "the Famous Hutchinson Flying Family," called by The Post Wednesday to ask "if anything is wrong with me" or were the lines true about the prophet in his home country.

"I'm not looking for any publicity, but I come here, right here that I could call my home, Washington; I came in here Monday from 22 countries and three colonies in the Western Hemisphere; I'm starting into another hemisphere. I've written eight books; I'm writing on three now . . . and not a word in the local papers," said the flier.

Well, here it is. The Flying Hutchinsons are in town, with their "Scroll Of All Nations"—bearing the signatures of rulers of the hemisphere. The famous family, that has demonstrated that housekeeping can be done in the clouds, hope after further sky-journeyings, to have the scroll complete and usable as an educational document in all the geography classes of the world. They'll be leaving again soon.

Capper, 75 Today, Has to Be 'Remote' Host at Topeka Party

Kansan's Annual Fete for Children Finds Him Absent for Second Time in 20 Years as Congress Stays in Session

Some Congressmen may like their lingering rendevous with Washington, but Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, wishes he were elsewhere—out in Topeka, to be specific.

Fact is, today is Senator Capper's seventy-fifth birthday and he is giving a party in Toepka for between 10,000 and 15,000 children—just as he has every July 14 for 31 years.

Like most hosts, he wants to be present when the party comes off. This is the second time during his more than 20 years in the Senate that he has been compelled to do his entertaining by remote control.

Otherwise, the day promises only pleasure. Although he admitted last night he sometimes wonders why he ever put his age "into the record," birthdays can't scare Senator Capper.

"I'm going better now, I think, than I was when I first came here, and I have big plans ahead," he said.

One thing he hopes to see accomplished before he leaves the Senate—and his present term runs almost four more years—is a vote for the District of Columbia, he asserted.

The first committee Senator Capper got on when he arrived in town in 1919 was the District Committee. He has continued to serve there, and, during the last eight years of Republican control of the Senate was its chairman. Many District laws bear his name. One of the best known is the Capper-Cramton act, under which the city's park system has developed.

The deadlock between House and Senate over District appropriations he considers due to "unreasonableness of the House."

"The Senate has conceded everything it can and shown a disposition to compromise. I hestitate to criticise the other side of Congress, but I think the House is being arbitrary about this," he said last night.

Promotion Urged As Reward for Squalus Victim

The House Naval Committee Wednesday recommended that Ensign J. H. Patterson, a victim of the submarine Squalus disaster, be awarded by legislation a posthumous commission as lieutenant, junior grade.

While the Navy Department opposed the measure as setting a bad precedent, Chairman Vinson contended the promotion was "the least" recognition that could be extended the officer and "clearly justified." Patterson would have been eligible for the promotion a few days after his death, the committee was told.

D. C. College Gets Woman's Estate

Special Dispatch to The Post

Janesville, Wis., July 13.—Walshington College of Law was named as the chief beneficiary of the estate of Mary C. Whelan, who was graduated from the institution in 1918, in her will filed for probate here today. Miss Whelan died last week.

She was engaged in private practice in Beloit, Wis., at the time of her death and previously served in the Federal Bureau of Narcotics. The amount of the bequest was not immediately disclosed.

Church Group Scores 7-Day Work Week at D. C. Jail

The Comittee on Civic Affairs of the Washington Federation of Churches Wednesday scored the seven-day work week of District Jail guards as "inhuman" and called upon the Commissioners to end a "vicious circle" of red tape in order to improve working conditions and salaries of the guards.

In a letter signed by its chairman, Wilbur LaRoe jr., who is also a member of the parole board, the committee pointed out the "failure of guards to receive promotion"; that a number have received no promotion in several years.

Stressing that it had previously complained about the lack of promotions and long workweek to former Welfare Director Elwood Street, only to be told it was a matter of appropriations, the federation unit asked the Comimssioners to find some way of clearing up the "unfortunate condition" at the jail.

Boss Pendergast Losses Scouted By U. S. Officials

Kansas City, July 13 (AP).—Federal officials were skeptical today of reports Boss Tom Pendergast's contracting firms were looted of $825,000. They expressed the theory most of the money went to the Democratic leader now in prison for income tax evasion.

Their belief has not been shaken by unexplained facts turned up by an audit ordered by Pendergast before he left for Leavenworth penitentiary to serve 15 months.

The audit, still in progress, first disclosed the leaks, but lack of records balked efforts to determine what became of the missing money.

Federal agents expressed the opinion much of the money went to Pendergast to pay his heavy horse race betting losses.

Maj. Pendergast, Army Officer, Dies At Walter Reed

Maj. Grady H. Pendergast died at Walter Reed Hospital Monday night, the War Department announced yesterday.

An instructor at the Command and General Staff School, Fort Leavenworth, Kans., the 47-year-old infantry officer was sent here for treatment last month. He had been in the military service since 1912, enlisting in the Fifteenth Infantry and gaining a commission in 1917.

He graduated from the Army War College three years ago.

Farewell-for-a-While Parties Fill D. C. Social Calendar These Days

Table Talk Dwells on Vacation Plans as Many Leave for Mountain and Beach Resorts; Some Eye Europe, Wonder if Voyage Is Wise Now

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

VACATION TRIPS, in progress and in prospect, are Washington society's chief stock in trade these days, as more and more local lights take off to mountain and beach resorts . . . leaving few celebrities besides air-conditioned Congressionals to hold down the fort.

Everybody I know seems either to be out of town or planning to go soon. A few, who have already been tripping, are back home briefly before starting off again. Others, who have stayed thus far with the hopes of sailing late this month or early in August, are wondering whether to go after all, in view of the war clouds shadowing Europe.

But traveling plans still make up most of the table talk at informal get-togethers, every one of which these days seems to be a farewell-for-a-while party.

For example, yesterday at a small luncheon given by Mrs. Robert Ash at her home in Bradley boulevard the first course was hardly served when talk turned to vacation plans. The hostess herself and her husband hope to leave this week-end for New York to visit friends and the World's Fair. Later, if their plans pan out, they will be off to Bermuda for a longer stay.

Mrs. Ash's mother, Mrs. Edward White Luna, who still calls Dallas, Tex., home, although she spends much time both here and in California, will remain at the Ash home while her son-in-law and daughter are away, but she expects to go late in the summer to Connecticut for a visit. Incidentally, Mrs. Luna's time now is pretty well taken up with trying to decide on a title for her novel, which she recently completed. Writing seems to run in her family, for one of her most distinguished author-relatives was her cousin, the late Richard Halliburton.

MRS. WALTER DISTLER, who was among the luncheon guests, has just returned from a jaunt that took her a-visiting in New Jersey, but she will leave again in a few days.

Last week-end she and her husband were guests of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Crosby, who have a place at Spring Lake and who feted their guests right and left. Then, while Mr. Distler proceeded to New York on business, his wife went over to Short Hills for a stay with Mrs. George A. Horton, later going to New York City for a few hours before returning to Washington Wednesday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Distler's plans for the remainder of the summer are a bit nebulous, but two trips definitely are on their calendar. They will go to Southampton for a visit, and early in August they will leave for Breton Woods, N. H., where they will be at the Mount Washington Hotel for a couple of weeks.

While in New Hampshire, they will see their daughter, Ann—better known to her friends as Sunndy—who is at Interlaken Camp at Croydon, and their son, Walter, jr. (Buddy), who is spending the summer at Camp Wachusset, at Holderness.

TOUR TALK: Mrs. Melville Bell Grosvenor, who is now at Gibson Island, and Mrs. William A. Morgan will leave the latter part of this month for a trip to Europe. Their plans, held in abeyance for some time because of the situation abroad, have now been completed, and their itinerary will call for a number of stops at fascinating ports along the Mediterranean coast and a stay of several days in Paris before they return home early in Septembr . . . Mr. Grosvenor, meanwhile, will go to Nova Scotia, where his father and mother, Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, are spending the summer.

MORE PLANS: Mrs. Royal McKenna, who recently underwent an operation, is still in Emergency Hospital, but expects to leave there in a few days, and and will go later to Seal Harbor, Me., to recuperate. Accompanying her will be her sister, Mrs. Edgar Edmonston, of Baltimore . . . If Congress keeps school much longer, a number of Senators and Representatives who usually spend vacation time in their home bailiwicks will stay around these parts or take a quick trip to Europe between sessions. Senator and Mrs. D. Worth Clark, for example, may travel around New England instead of heading West . . . And Representative and Mrs. Mike Monroney may take a place in Westport, Conn., until autumn, instead of going back to Oklahoma.

Guests included the Norwegian Minister, Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne; the Charge d'Affaires of Poland and Mme. Wankowicz; Senator and Mrs. Arthur Vandenburg, the latter wearing a chic black and white chiffon with flame flowers at the neckline; Representative Caroline O'Day, whose frock was of gray chiffon, and the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Francis B. Sayre.

Mrs. H. F. Vollberg was matron of honor and Miss Helen J. Wallace was maid of honor. They wore gowns of rose and pink chiffon over taffeta, with coronets of pink roses and delphinium in their hair, and carried bouquets of these flowers.

The Gentler Sex

—By Malvina Lindsay

Dowd's Diary

Oh, for the good old leisurely days that a few may still remember,
When women bought summer clothes in May and wore them till November!

In early spring I chose an outfit,
black and white and snappy,
And for a couple of weeks I felt superior, smart and happy,
And then I learned that everyone who was not a genius or recluse,
Was jauntily attired in an ensemble of chartreuse.

And so I hurried to the shops, diked myself in green and yellow (Even though I would have looked much better in something much more mellow)
Then, just as I was thinking, "Well for once I'm in the swim," They told me that japonica had become the Nation's whim.

I had no more become a Circe with a wimple and a snood,
Then I went to a bridge soiree and felt extremely crude,
For all my friends and enemies were looking "just too sweet."
As "little girls" with frills and bows and baby bonnets neat.

I read that Romany trends were in and not to be ouidone,
I became a "little gypsy," ready to gambol in the sun,
But scarcely had I donned my clothes with all parts in cohesion,
Then word came that the thing to do was to be a Polynesian.

I was sold a simple print in silk to see me through till fall,
Then learned that cotton was the rage, much smarter to enthrall
The males this season said the ads, so I got a linen suit,
Then found spun rayon was being worn by women more acute.

I decked myself in gingham gay, then found my clothes a blight,
For lo, the annual all-white vogue had crept in overnight!
I rushed to fit myself in cool and virginal attire,
Then found my friends in black chiffon were beginning to perspire.

I bought a sheer of darkest hue and felt both suave and smart,
Yet three days later found myself
a woman set apart,
For everyone was stepping out in black, shiny silk and jersey,
And someway everything I wore seemed summery, limp and furzy.

Now if I were to get a satin,
up-to-date and smart,
Why two weeks later I would learn that wool was in the mart,
And all the rage upon the part of women in the know,
So what is there to do but get an outfit for an Eskimo?

Is it any wonder that every woman's a "wreck" and has no leisure,
When to the fashion fuehrers she must constantly be an appeaser?

Dark Dots on White for Cool Effect

Polka dots come and go year after year, season after season, but they seem to be the most popular of prints this summer. Representative of the easy-to-look-at polka dot is the widely spaced one used in this washable Truhu Silk. Your Figure, Madame!

—By Ida Jean Kain

Ethel Merman Keeps Figure Merely by Obeying Health Laws

THIS IS a request number . . . someone wants to know how Ethel Merman keeps her marvelous figure. So, armed with my trusty tape measure, I went around and interviewed the original rhythm girl. Her figure is marvelous: Chest, 34½ inches; bust, 37 inches; waist, 25 inches; hips, 37 inches.

That's what rhythm does for a girl—rhythm of work and play, perfectly balanced. There's the secret of the amazing vitality back of that vibrantly beautiful voice . . . call it umph, yumph, or oomph, she has it!

Rest Important

But let's start at the beginning of her career. Many girls on their way to success are willing to work hard and to give a career everything they have, often too much. They forget that health is a most important factor. But when Ethel Merman was doing stenographic work in the daytime and singing at night, she always managed to get 10 hours of sleep every night in spite of her two jobs.

Now that she is a well-established star, her program is still one that guards her vitality. Usually, one thinks of the theater personalities in connection with cafe society and glamorous settings. But Miss Merman's favorite recreation is relaxing in the sun, sailing a boat, swimming or playing tennis. She genuinely enjoys sports because, having started them in her teens, she can hold her own with the competition.

Her perfect figure is no accident. Outdoor sports are not only healthful but they make for ultra-streamlines. The "Guess Your Weight" man at the Fair, who seldom misses, guessed Miss Merman to weigh 110 pounds. She weighs 121 pounds for a height of 5 feet and 5 inches.

She watches her weight, however, and has her own set of rules. Here are the things she never does: Adds salt to food, takes any liquids with meals except one cup of tea, eats desserts, or eats too much at one time—believing that the more you eat, the more you will want to overeat. Anyone who follows that set of rules is unlikely to have to go on a diet.

Plenty of Sleep and Outdoor Sports In Her Formula

Likes Right Foods

Moreover, she likes the right foods — lean meat, vegetables, salads, fruit and milk. She has a unique scheme for drinking her milk—she takes it in the afternoon because she thinks it is less fattening. Well, milk contains just as many calories in the afternoon as it does at noon, but she has something there: Too much liquid with the meals does increase the food capacity.

A Woman's New York

—By Alice Hughes

Aboard Santa Fe "Chief," July 13.

GIRL ABOUT AMERICA—Just before I left on this nutty junket to Hollywood, I lunched at the World's Fair French Pavilion with that grand woman and fine old trouper, Hedda Hopper, known to films these many years. I asked her what to wear in filmland, telling her that in New York I usually wear black by day. "Perfectly fine," said Hedda. "Women in Hollywood now dress just as New York women do." That saved me a few headaches over summer prints.

Incidentally, Hedda is beautifully slim, and at this luncheon I discovered why. Like so many of us, she works at it. It was a wondrous meal—but Hedda ate up to the fish course, and stopped dead. No wonder she's a lovely willow.

I LEARN THAT our long-time stage darling, Ina Claire, is now living in California in real wedded bliss—and is letting her figure go with the years. I'm glad Ina is happy now. Ten years ago I was in Hollywood when she was newly married to the late John Gilbert, and while both were marvelous people in their respective ways, they just didn't match, and we all felt it.

My old pal, Vyvyan Donner, who does the fashion newsreels, sailed for Paris the other day to photograph the best of the French fashion openings, and to bring back word of the best Parisian influences which will color and shape our own openings next month. Wanna buy a snood?

THERE'S A rage for hoods over the heads these days. Sort of a modish monastic effect. Mary Anita Loos goes for this. She's the current wonder babe of New York—beautiful boy-beset, but level-headed and as cool and smart as they come. How about this hood business, anyhow?

Birds and Beasts Are Wiser Parents Than Many Human Mothers—and Mothers-in-Law—Says Reader

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Your articles on mothers-in-law and mothers are extremely interesting and helpful. An analysis of mothers' attitudes toward their children after the latter are grown; and of the frequent distortions of so-called "mother love" (which I have observed and experienced), should be made the subject of an unsentimental study. A mother's love for her children has been, and is today, regarded by some as holy. As a matter of fact, it seems rarely to reach the noble heights of true understanding and unselfishness.

The human mother fulfills her biological function, and, even as the wild creatures, is prompted to laborious self-sacrifice to promote the welfare of her young. This devotion is instinctive to most of the higher animals. Why, therefore, should it be regarded as something so holy and sacred—for which the offspring should be eternally grateful—in the case of human creatures? The instinct is largely the result of glandular activity, generally too powerful to be resisted. Wild birds pluck feathers from their breasts to line their nests and work frantically to feed their young, even when the latter almost equal the parent in size.

It would be better for most human children if their parents would emulate the wild creatures, and voluntarily loose their bonds when their offspring are in a position to look after themselves. How many mothers do this? Instead, they seems to have an overpowering desire to continue to possess their children, body and soul, regardless of how harmful it may be to their development, happiness and general welfare. Under guise of being utterly unselfish and self-sacrificing, devoted to their children above everything else, they bend every effort to keep them to themselves; to prevent their marriage; do their utmost (unconsciously, perhaps) to separate husband and wife in order to reclaim their own child;—and all in such devious ways that only by setting up a permanent barrier can the children protect themselves from interference.

If mothers could only realize that their role is primarily biological and wholly natural; not something holy; that children are not to be regarded as mediums through which mothers may realize their own emotional urges; but that they should be treated as friends, entitled to the same consideration, courtesy and respect; and that mothers deserve no other reward for devotion than the friendship and respect of their children—and then only if they have earned these justly, and not by emotional appeals—certainly a lot of maladjustment and unhappiness could be avoided.

Human beings have departed too far from the natural pattern, exemplified by the wild creatures who leave their young in peace after they are able to care for themselves. Imagine the turmoil in the bird and animal kingdoms if the parents came back to boss their adult offspring, even unto the second and third generations! Most human children are potentially lovely, but most human mothers are pretty terrible, because of qualities that seem to develop in connection with parenthood—qualities which seem to make them offensive to their children and to other adults as well. Is this inevitable? Once they have children, they seem to become primitive, to lose their capacity for objective thought and impartial action. They certainly lose their perspective. D. M.

Sympathy for "G. L. M."

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: After reading the letter from "G. L. M.," published in your column of July 10, I feel that I must write to express my deep sympathy for this bewildered wife, who is having the same painful experience with her mother-in-law that I had with an older relative of my husband's, who reared him and called him her son.

When we were first married, I felt much embarrassed that she did not like me, and did everything I could to be kind and agreeable—with no success at all. However, when we came to the beautiful and interesting city of Washington to live, she would write that she wanted to come for a visit, and she did come, during the hottest weather, for weeks at a time (her longest visit was for seven weeks). We were living in a small apartment with our two boys and I was doing the cooking. However, she insisted on going sight-seeing nearly every day.

I endured all this patiently with never a complaint. After a number of years, when she had seen all the sights and did not care to come for any more visits, she started writing to my husband at his office, despite the fact that I had kept up a correspondence with her for nearly 20 weary years, merely to keep peace in the family. The burden of her letters to my husband seemed to be that I, and all my people, were "stuck up" and had snubbed her and his other relatives. She kept up this line until my husband actually believed it, although he knew my people well and had always been fond of them.

So, my advice to "G. L. M." would be this—take your husband to task, in no uncertain terms, for allowing this intrigue to go on. Intrigue is what it actually is, and to my way of thinking, every husband owes his wife more respect than to countenance such interference from a designing woman, as there is no limit to the steps she will take to make her point. I made the awful mistake of trying to get along with this woman, as my husband asked me to do. But I regret it now, and I think it is an excellent idea for the mother-in-law to assume some responsibility for keeping the relationship pleasant. No one respects the person who will not defend himself when unjustly treated.

Later he temporarily abandoned America for a two-year bicycle tour through Europe, writing travel stories and impressions on the way.

Returning, he joined the staff of the old Herald and later the Times. The ten years prior to his retirement he spent as a White House reporter. He became acquainted with several Presidents and other political leaders.

At various times during his life here he established schools of language and interior decorating, conducting the courses himself.

Names Given 3 Indian Cultures Of Southwest

Anasazi, Hohokam and Mogollom are the crytic names of three distinct cultures of primitive inhabitants of the American Southwest which are described in a bulletin just issued by the Bureau of American Ethnology, Smithsonion Institution.

According to Dr. Frank H. H. Roberts, Smithsonian archeologist, the remains which have been found give evidence of the existenc many centuries ago of these three separate civilizations in what is now New Mexico and Arizona.

The Anasazi includes the basket makers and pueblo builders. Hohokamites, lowland dwellers, practiced cremation, whereas the Anasazi buried their dead. Latest to be differentiated is the Mogollom culture, which centered in the San Francisco and Mimbres valleys of southwestern New Mexico.

Padlocked Playgrounds Stir Ire of Sledge-Hammer Wielder

Enraged Over Shut Playspots, Auditor Willing to Dare Prison Term For Sake of D. C. Children

Padlocks on the 112 playgrounds closed to Washington children stand a chance of being smashed to scrap iron. Unless Congress or the recently appointed playground commission find some way to release the $25,000 fund in the District supply bill necessary for the maintenance of the recreation centers, George Smith, an auditor at the Broadmoor Hotel is ready to take a sledge-hammer in hand and open the gates himself.

Smith, who is far from being muscle bound, says that what Washington needs is a Boston tea party.

"Mothers and fathers who have no vote have to stand by and watch their children play in sweltering, crowded streets where death never takes a holiday. Somebody ought to do something about it. And I guess that somebody is me," he told The Post yesterday.

Smith doesn't care if his sledge-hammer tactics throw him as far as the District Jail. He figures that for every day he might spend behind bars, hundreds of youngsters would have a better chance to spend their play-time in areas where they will be safe from the dangers which now beset them in traffic-jammed streets.

Educated at Phillips Exeter Academy, and the University of Nevada, where he specialized in economics, Washington's one-man protest against a situation which hourly threatens the lives of school children, is the grandson of Gen. George R. Smith, paymaster general of the Army during the World War. He himself served in the Army in Honolulu where he was assigned to the Coast Artillery.

In New York in 1936 when he was recreation director for Knickerbocker Village, housing project on the lower East Side, he spent his extra time working at a Spanish aid station where food, clothing and medical supplies were collected for Spanish government troops and civilians.

Smith came from Florida about six months ago to make his home here at 3118 Rodman street northwest.

Cummings Resigns As Utility Officer

New York, July 13 (AP).—The resignation of Francis P. Cummings as consulting vice president and a director of the Associated Gas & Electric Co., was announced today by the company. No successor was chosen to Cummings who, it was said, has been seriously ill several months.

Cummings was one of three independent directors appointed as a result of a stipulation entered into by the company and a group of creditors which petitioned in June, 1934, for a reorganization of the company. In its announcement of Cummings' resignation, the company said it was felt the stipulation no longer served any useful purpose, and that "hereafter, as long as the stipulation remains in force," the independent directors would be appointed "in accordance with the by-laws."

Conn Beats Bettina for Light-Heavy Title

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

For no reason at all, this is Navy Day in this department. At least the tang of the sea is something to contemplate, the humidity being what it is. Our guest of honor is that old seafaring man, Heinie Miller, who sailed the seven oceans when a U. S. gob was a sissy if he couldn't show a tattoo job on something besides both arms.

POVICH

Advance, Heinie, and be recognized as Able-Bodied Seaman Harvey L. Miller, of the U. S. Gunboat Wilmington, and lightweight champion of the Navy, 1908.

"Well, it was back in Hongkong, 31 years ago and the Wilmington was doing duty in Chinese waters. We had been hearing about a Chinese fighter, a heavyweight, who was popping over a lot of European fighters in Hongkong. We didn't believe any Chinaman could fight with his fists and we looked around on ship for somebody who could lick this Chinese champ.

"They told us he weighed 220 pounds, and we didn't believe that, either. We didn't think the Chinese ran that big. Anyway, this was no job for a little man, so we picked our best big man, a 175-pound Negro named Colvin Sims, who had shipped from somewhere in the deep South.'

"They put on the show in the Theatre Royal in Hongkong City Hall. Tai Woo was the Chinaman's name, and he was as big as they said. He was a Manchukuan, we learned later. He wasn't just big, he was fat, and those were the days when Chinese were still wearing queues. He had it twisted around the top of his head, and sitting in his own corner he was enough to scare a colored boy like Sims.

Incense Burning No Help

"It didn't help Sims any, either, when the Chinaman, just before the fight, burned some incense and said some Buddhist prayers. By that time, Sims was looking for a way out. When the opening bell rang, Wai Too comes out of his corner with a loud bellow and rushes at Sims. The colored boy didn't want any part of that kind of a fighter, and started running. It was a weird first round, with Sims running away and Wai Too trying to catch him and landing punches on Sims' back.

"Well, an old gob named Pete Johnson is in Sims' corner and between rounds he tells the colored boy 'If you don't start fighting, boy, I'm gonna hit you over the head with the ring bottle.' Anyway, the second round starts, and before Sims can get out of his corner, there is the Chinee taking a punch at him.

"Sims ducked, by instinct, and then by instinct he threw his right hand into Tai Woo's body. His glove, up to the wrist, disappeared into the Chinee's fat tummy, and Wai Too went down. Still scared, Sims was as pale as his complexion would permit him to be, until the referee counted "eight." At "nine" Sims' eyes brightened and at "ten," with the Chinee still on the floor, Sims took a hitch in his belt and strutted to his corner.

"Atta boy, Sims,' said Johnson, 'I knew you could do it. Why didn't you fight that way in the first round?'

"'The first round?' said Sims. 'Why, boss, in that first round, ah was just feelin' him out.'"

In the Philippines, 1908

Miller takes us now across the Pacific to Manila, later that summer in 1908. It seems that the Japanese colony in the Philippines was just celebrating the close of a gigantic festival, when the U. S. gunboat Wilmington hove into the harbor.

American sailors were famed in the Philippines for their boxing ability, and it was in Manila that Miller had won the lightweight championship of the Navy. So it was that Admiral George B. Harber, of the American fleet, was visited by an official delegation of Japanese citizens who had a request to make.

They wanted the admiral to select an American boxer to meet the newly crowned Japanese jiu jitsu champion, one Ujiro Omato as a feature of their festival. Admiral Harber approved, asked his athletic officer to pick a man.

"Of necessity, the American had to be a little man," relates Heinie. "This Omato only weighed about 100 pounds. Well, they picked me. I was a 125-pounder, but that was satisfactory to the Japanese. Before the bout, we got our instruction.

"They told me that I was to fight with gloves and could use any sort of a legal punch. But I couldn't lay hold of Omato under the rules. They told me that Omato would not punch, but would use any of his jiu jitsu grips. It was to be three falls to a finish. The first man who went down twice was licked.

Near-Fatal Handshake

"I came out of my corner at the start and naturally held out my hand to shake. The next thing I knew, I was flying through the air and had landed on my head in my own corner. The Jap didn't understand this handshake business and I had left myself open for a sucker grip.

"While still down, I tried to figure what to do about it, and was half afraid to get up. When I did get up, Omato came in wide-open and I banged him with a right uppercut. He was only a 100-pounder, remember, and he went down, hurt. He stayed down, too, and forfeited the third fall.

"When he came to he was mad as a hornet. Apparently, they hadn't told him all the rules. He didn't think I was supposed to punch, only wrestle. But he had a novel alibi. He said he thought they put those gloves on me as a handicap because I was a bigger man than he was."

Pittsburgh Boy Rallies For Decision

By the Associated Press

New York, July 13.—Billy Conn's snake-like left hand proved better than the "hex" tonight as Pittsburgh's fighting Harp came from behind to outpoint Melio Bettina and win the world's light-heavyweight championship before a wild cheering crowd of 15,295 in Madison Square Garden. Conn weighed 170¼; Bettina 173¼.

For five rounds, the Smoky City Irishman couldn't get started against the baffling southpaw style and short left hooks of the burly Italian from Beacon, N. Y. Then he started to go, and at the finish held a slim margin, just wide enough for a unanimous decision of Referee Frankie Fullam and both judges.

It was as tough a battle of left hands, and as close a struggle of two fast, slashing fist-tossing youngsters as the Garden ring has seen in years. There were no knockdowns, but in the eleventh a right hand had Bettina staggering and in the fourteenth Conn slipped to the floor momentarily, his foot sliding out from under him as he stepped into spilled water in his own corner.

So fast and continuous was the action, except for a short time in the sixth and seventh rounds, that the crowd, split into partisan groups, many of them home-town supporters from Beacon and Pittsburgh, was on its feet almost continually, cheering and whistling. The promoters also had plenty to cheer about, in addition to the bristling action, for the cash customers contributed to a surprisingly large gross gate of $50,869.11.

Preliminary results were:

Pete Asero, 145, New York, knocked out Lon Miller, 142, New York; third round.

Whitey Schramm, 168, Pittsburgh, and Charley Harvey, 171, New York, draw; four rounds.

Jackie Cann, 160, Pittsburgh, decisioned Lou Villante, 160, New York; four rounds.

Jose Basora, 152, Puerto Rico, knocked out Jackie Stewart, 148, Jersey City; second round.

Dave Clark, 174, Detroit, decisioned Tiger Jack Fox, 174, Spokane; eight rounds.

Singh's Cobra Grip Claims 2 Victims On Stadium Mat

Nanjo Singh's "cobra deathlock" did double duty last night at Turner's arena—first on a volunteer "strong man" and then on Laverne Baxter, who was forced to say "uncle" after 17 minutes of the main event.

Nanjo was so enrapt in admiration of his pet clutch that he refused to let Baxter go for fully two minutes, and Referee Casey Berger had to twist the turbaned Hindu's neck even then. Baxter slid to the floor and remained there apparently dreaming peacefully.

Steve Johnson, local cab driver, who had planned to take up Nanjo's offer of $500 to anyone breaking the cobra clutch, was barred from the ring after a physician examined him. "Strong Man" Dick Mahan, however, immediately jumped into the ring, pounded his chest and blew up an inner tube for the folks—about 1,700 in number—and shouting for Singh's hide.

Nanjo obliged and put him out in two minutes. Jim Clinstock defeated Bibber McCoy in 12 minutes with a body press, Jack Hader beat Ernie Powers in one minute with a cradle hold, Red Ryan beat Hank Metheny in 22 minutes with a dropkick and Pete Managoff beat Angelo Leone in 16 minutes with a body slam.

P. G. A. Dark Horse Pauses for Refreshment

E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, string-bean golfer out of Arkansas and Oak Park, Ill., takes his daily nineteenth-hole nourishment, a glass of milk. His system apparently is a good one, however, for Harrison is the only dark horse remaining in the Profesional Golfers' Association championships and proved it by trouncing Bruce Coltart, 10 and 9, to go into the quarter-final round yesterday

Nelson Wins, Runyan Loses in P. G. A. Play

Picard, Metz and Harrison Also Gain Semifinals Today; Open Champ Nears Mark Set by Gene Sarazen Back in 1922

By Bill Boni.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, July 13.—By playing 27 holes in 19 pars and 8 birdies, Byron Nelson, the reigning United States Open champion from Reading, Pa., today came a big step closer to becoming the first golfer since Gene Sarazen to win the Open and the P. G. A. championship in the same year.

Nelson, one of the best iron players in the business, blasted Blond Emerick Kocsis, of Orio, Mich., out of the twenty-second P. G. A. tournament at the Pomonok Country Club by the lop-sided score of 10 and 9.

Runyan Defeated

All in the same afternoon Defending Champion Paul Runyan came to the end of a nine-match winning streak, Henry Picard had to haul himself up by his boot straps to avoid losing to a little-known assistant pro, and E. J. (Dutch) Harrison reached the semifinal round in his first P. G. A. tourney. But it was Nelson who put on the demonstration of how this sub-normally short golf course should be played.

The slim former Texan, who holds the 36-hole tournament record of 130 strokes, did half that well for the morning half of his quarter-final "match" with Kocsis. Lord Byron, with seven 3's on his card, shot a 7-under-par 65 into Kocsis' ruddy face, and, since that left him 7 up, had to go only nine more holes to close out the match.

Even Nelson was willing to admit his morning's work was a "masterpiece."

Not Real Test

"Still," he added, "this course isn't a real test. I'd say my two 68's in the Open at Philadelphia were better rounds. I'm happy—but you'd do me a favor and it would be worth a sawbuck, if you could find some way to steal Harrison's putter."

In tomorrow's 36-hole semi-final, which he must win for a shot at the feat Sarazen performed in 1922, Nelson will go up against Harrison, the lean, lanky ex-Arkansan from Oak Park, Ill., who hasn't been very bashful either, in his man-handling of Pomonok's par.

Reds Defeat Giants; Lead By 6½ Games

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 13.—William (Bucky) Walters, a good infielder who became a better pitcher, shut out the New York Giants on five hits today and with the help of his hard-hitting teammates gave the Cincinnati Reds a 7 to 0 victory that boosted their National League lead to 6½ games.

The lean young righthander allowed only two hits for eight innings and even in the ninth, when the Giants loaded the bases on three successive singles with one out, kept the situation under control by making Alex Kampouris and pinchhitter Ken O'Dea lay down grounders for easy outs.

Until the ninth it looked like the game would be decided on two home runs—one by Wally Berger in the second and another by Harry Craft in the sixth.

But in the final chapter the Reds batted around off Rookie Manny Salvo, who had succeeded Hal Schumacher at the start of that inning. Tony Bongiovanni, filling in at rightfield for the injured Ival Goodman, and Frank McCormick singled, advanced on a long fly by Ernie Lombardi, and scored on Craft's single to short center. Berger drew his fourth straight walk, Billy Myers doubled, Kampauris

5-Run Uprising In 9th Ties Score; Boston Wins in 10th

Cleveland, July 13 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox eked out a 6-to-5, tenth-inning victory over the Cleveland Indians tonight after knocking Bob Feller from the mound with a six-hit barrage in the fourth. Lou Finney's pinch single drove in the winning run after a five-run Cleveland rally in the ninth tied the count. The victory was Boston's ninth in a row.

Hunt Leading As Rain Halts State Net Play

Sabin, Also Advance Before Shower Hits; Resume Tourney Today

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, Md., July 13.—Rain sent the players scuttling from the courts, the crowd to shelter and the committee into emergency session to determine the course of play as the quarter-final round in singles was partially completed today in the Maryland State Open tennis championship at the Baltimore Country Club.

Two players, unseeded Edward Aloo, of San Francisco, and Wayne Sabin, of Portland, Oreg., second on the select list, reached the semifinal round. Play was halted in the other two semifinals and will be resumed tomorrow morning.

Gilbert Hunt, of Washington, the defending champion, had not gone far enough in his match with Henry Prusoff, of Seattle, Wash., seeded tenth, to indicate the likely result. Hunt was leading, 2-1, but Prusoff was serving, when the rain began to fall.

In the third round of doubles Robert Low and Larry Dee, both of California, defeated Bill Breese and Buddy Adair, both of Washington, 6—2, 7—5.

Castleman Released To Jersey City Club

New York, July 13 (AP).—Clydell Castleman, righthanded pitcher who has been with the Giants since 1934, was released under option today to the club's Jersey City farm in the International League.

He won 15 and lost 6 his first full season in the National League, and won 11 against 6 defeats in 1937, but failed to become a .500 ptticher in either 1936 or 1938, and this year had won 1 and lost 2 in 12 appearances, 4 as a starter.

Champs Lose 6th Straight; Donald Fails

Unbeaten Pitcher Escapes Defeat as Murphy Takes Rap; 25,764 See Game

By the Associated Press

Detroit, July 13.—The world champion New York Yankees blew up in the eighth inning against the Tigers today, giving away nine runs on five hits, for their sixth straight setback, 10 to 6.

Atley Donald, the Rookie right-hander who has won 10 without defeat this season to rank as the major leagues' leading pitcher, started all the trouble but was not charged with the defeat. Although belted for eight hits in the first seven innings, he had a 4 to 1 lead when he loaded the bases with three walks and was removed in the eighth.

6 Walks, 4 Singles

Johnny Murphy, the champions' relief ace, then gave successive singles to pinchhitters Rudy York and Roy Bell to let in three runs and took the blame for the defeat. Marius Russo and Steve Sundra also had to be called to duty in the big inning as Barney McCosky singled in a run, three more passes walked home two runs, and Charley Gehringer singled in another pair.

To add to the debacle Archie McKain let the Yankees fill the sacks in the ninth on a walk and two hits, then forced in two runs with additional bases on balls and had to be relieved by Al Benton.

18 Passes Altogether

Altogether there were 18 passes issued in the game. Big Buck Newsom started it by giving three in the first inning and two of them, linked with a single by Joe DiMaggio, cost him a run. Another walk, a single by Donald and a double by Red Rolfe gave the Yanks two more runs in the seventh before Newsom was removed for a pinch-hitter.

Joe Gordon hit his fourteenth homer of the season off Luther Thomas in the eighth before the Tigers tore out their big bite to make him the winning pitcher. A single and a double in the second gave the Tigers their only run off Donald. More than 25,000 saw the game.

Browns Win as Nats Waste 3-Run Homer

Gelbert Hits for Circuit With Two Men On Base in Second Inning; Bluege's Error in 8th Gives St. Louis 4-3 Victory

Special Dispatch to The Post

St. Louis, July 13.—A startling wild throw by the veteran Ossie Bluege—of all people—sabotaged the cause of the Nats today and they dropped a 4-3 decision to the St. Louis Browns as a gift run pattered across the plate in the eighth inning.

With St. Louis sweltering in the heat of a torrid afternoon during which the thermometer zoomed to 98 degrees, and Joe Krakauskas, near collapse, was forced out of the ball game, the one of the two errors of the afternoon cost the Nats their defeat.

Only five minutes after Bluege had gone into the game as a replacement for the veteran Charley Gelbert, another heat victim, he made the misplay which led to the winning run. It happened with one out, and the score tied at 3-3, on a ground ball hit by Harlond Clift. The usually reliable Bluege flung the ball wide of first base and Clift galloped to second with the winning run.

Kennedy Winning Hurler

Pete Appleton, the Nats' third pitcher of the afternoon, who had been entrusted at the start of the eighth with the 3-3 tie, negotiated the second out of the inning when Gallagher lined to Case. But ex-Yankee Myril Hoag lined a single into right field and Clift scored with the decisive run.

Lanky Vernon Kennedy was the winning pitcher. He held the Nats to eight hits while Krakauskas, Alex Alexandra and Appleton were surrendering ten to the Browns.

Charley Gelbert stood between the Nats and a shut-out defeat today. He produced all of the Washington runs in the second inning, with his first homer of the season—a clout to the right field roof with Cecil Travis and Buddy Myer on base.

Nats Miss Chance

The Nats muffed a chance for an uproarious inning in that second, incidentally. After Travis had walked and Myer had singled to left, Gelbert followed with his homer with only one out. Then Rick Ferrell lined a single to right and Krakauskas, himself singled to

Texas Open Champ Beats Bobby Brownell in Western Golf

Bob Babbish, Stewart Win Two Matches

Brownell Wins First Match Over Kerkow; Gus Moreland Victor In Oklahoma Play

By the Associated Press

Oklahoma City, July 13.—Defending Champion Bob Babbish and Medalist Verne "Spec" Stewart led the way into the third round of the Western Amateur Golf Tournament tonight after two 18-hole "suicide" laps chopped the field from 64 to 16 in the first day of match play.

Babbish, Detroit University ace who won the title last year at South Bend, Ind., disposed of Bill Howle, of Oklahoma City, 2 and 1, in the opening round and ousted E. J. Rogers, of Oklahoma City, former holder of both the State Amateur and State Open titles, 3 and 2, in the second.

Billy Coffey, Texas P. G. A. Open champion, routed Robert Brownell, classy Duke golfer, 3 and 2, clinching the match with birdie 2 on 126-yard No. 15.

Birdie Wins Match

Brownell was 2 down to young and spectacular Coffey at the end of 4 holes, but turned even by carding birdie 3 on 388-yard No. 9. Brownell was 1 over par on each eleventh and twelfth to let Coffey go 2 up again and Coffey's easy birdie on No. 15 won the match. Brownell had entered the second round by eliminating Spence Kerkow, Cincinnati golfer, 3 and 2, in the first round.

After downing W. J. Berkley, of St. Louis, 4 and 3, in the first round, Stewart was forced to shoot the same sub-par golf which carried him to medalist honors in order to beat Francis Fleming, of Oklahoma City, one up.

Moreland Victor

Gus Moreland, who was forced to go 18 holes to beat Harrison Smith of Oklahoma City, 1-up, in the first round, ousted Bob Conlift, jr., of Oklahoma City, 4 and 2, in the afternoon. The Ptoria, Ill., player, making another bid for the title he won at Colorado Springs in 1932, finished the round and came in with a 68.

Ed Kingsley, Salt Lake City, had little trouble dumping Rodney Bibs, of Omaha, Neb., in the morning round but Labdon Harris, Guthrie, Okla., school teacher, playing for an Oklahoma City club, forced him to the limit in the afternoon.

Kingsley dropped a 40-footer from off the green to take the hole and a 2-up victory.

Chick Harbert, Battle Creek, Mich., moved into the third round by downing J. C. Hamilton, the Oklahoma City lad who fired a pair of 69's in the qualifying trials, 3 and 1.

Mary Wilder Wins Junior Golf Title

Chicago, July 13 (AP).—Mary Wilder, of Glencoe, Ill., won the Women's Eastern Junior golf championship today with a 2-up victory over Georgia Tainter, of Fargo, N. Dak.

Miss Wilder had a medal card of 39-42—81, only five shots over par, as against Miss Tainter's 40-43—83.

New Orleans Boy Wins Pennsylvania Net Title

Philadelphia, July 13 (AP).—Little Earl "Tony" Bartlett, jr., of New Orleans, won the Pennsylvania State junior tennis championship today by beating Vic Seixas, of Philadelphia, 5—7, 6—3, 7—5, 6—2.

Another New Orleans entry from Fortier High, Glenn Gardner, captured the boys title, beating Bobby Harbach, of Reading, Pa., 5—7, 6—3, 7—5, in a match twice stopped by rain.

Bartlett and Gardner also won in the doubles.

promising younger pros, won his semi-final spurs by turning back Horton Smith, his original sponsor, 4 and 3. In the upper half of the draw Metz, no worse than even after the seventh hole in the morning, whipped Runyan 3 and 1, and Picard had to win the last two holes to top California-born Munday, Runyan's asisstant, by the same score.

1,000 See Matches

Runyan and Metz had a hell-for-leather battle all the way, and one that attracted a good half of the day's 1,000 galleryites. Metz, 4 up at the half-way mark on a 66 and a handsome 100-yard niblick pitch that came within 2 inches of holing out for an eagle at the eighteenth, lost half of that lead when Runyan came back with a sub-par 33 for the first afternoon nine.

But Dick, runner-up to Ralph Guldahl in the open at Denver last year, wasn't letting this chance for a national title slip out of his grasp. Runyan came up on even terms with him through the next five holes, and right there Dick shut the door in his face. He chipped up 4 feet from the pin to wi the thirty-third hole with a birdie 4, laid Runyan a dead stymie to go 2 up on the thirty-fourth, and then halved the thirty-fifth to win the match.

Munday, like Kocsis playing in his first major tournament, gave Picard an unexpectedly close fight. He was even or better against the Chocolate Soldier from the fourth hole until "Pic" finally went in front at the thirty-first, as Munday knocked his drive out of bounds. Rod made one more try, squaring the match for the last time with a fine approach that brought him a birdie 4 at the thirty-third. But wandering tee shots got Munday in the soup on the next two holes and a par-par finish was enough for Picard to win.

It was Walter's fourteenth victory against six setbacks and also his sixteenth complete game, which is tops in the majors.

'The New Rock Creek Club' Latest Publinks Golf Group

Bob Coleman Victor in First Tournament Of New Club; Match Play Tourney Planned

In another attempt to organize public links golfers into an organization with handicaps, recognized tournaments, etc., Mrs. Mae Hill and Manager Cleve Miller have formed "The New Rock Creek Club" among the regular customers of the Sixteenth street layout.

Mrs. Hill got after some of the steady players, good and bad, persuaded them to turn in three scores for handicap purposes and the first official tournament of the group was concluded yesterday, with winners in three classes.

Bob Coleman, a member of the Roosevelt High golf team, captured low gross honors with a 36-38, 74, for the A and B courses. Low net in Class A went to Joe Hayes, 79-12, 67, while Mrs. Hill, better known as "Mae" among the clubmembers, finished among the prize winners with a creditable 82-14, 68.

There will be a lot of handicap cutting in Class B as two of the members played well below their qualifying scores in winning first and second low net awards. E. Dove had 76-18, 58, and R. West 78-16, 62. Herbert Bradburn was third with 84-18, 66.

The scores were also in the 60's in Class C. J. C. Bibbs winning low net with 87-22, 65, with W. T. Estes 90-23, 67, and Mrs. Rose Weinberg, 105-26, 79. Mrs. Weinberg was out in 46 but went 13 strokes higher on the back nine.

The success of the group thus far has encouraged the others who thought it was just a novelty and would die out in a few weeks. With Mrs. Hill, Miller, who donated first prize in the first event, and Ray Henry, starter, as promoters, another event is planned in a few days, a match play with flights for all the players.

Over 40 already have recognized handicaps, from turning in three or more cards. Mrs. Nick Altrock, wife of the Washington National's comedian coach is a member and Nick is sure to join when the team returns from the Western tour. The better golfers, Andy Oliveri, and the others are prospects and a real live wire bunch of municipal golfers may result from Mrs. Hill's plan.

Mrs. Lafayette Franklin retained the lead she held at the halfway mark of the Mucaster Trophy play at Washington Golf and Country Club to win the cup by a six-stroke margin yesterday over a large field of clubmates.

Mrs. R. N. Sutton won low gross with a pair of 91's for a 182 total. Mrs. Don Johnson won second low net in class A, in a draw with Mrs. R. E. On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, July 13.—Gene Sarazen, who has never been known to refer to a spade as anything except a garden instrument, believes that one of the things that is hurting pro golf is the presence of the wives of the players at every tournament.

CONSIDINE

"This is going to make me as popular as a case of athlete's foot," Sarazen told us the other day at Pomonok, "but those dear girls are hurting the game. Not that they want to, of course, but they are. They sit around and look pretty and they're swell girls, but sooner or later during a tournament they're going to say something that starts an argument. And they're bound to hate the guy who beats their husband out of the money. That's human.

"They take their guys home too soon after the day's play is over, too. It doesn't give the players a chance to mingle with one another, or with the club members or the people who come out to see them play, and that's bad for the game. The wives make them careful of their money, too. That's a good thing for the husbands, and wives, but it's a little tough on golf. The average young pro today wouldn't spend a nickel for a ferry-boat ride. Hell, between Jones, Hagen, Armour and myself we must have spent $150,000 going after the British Open alone. But none of us regret it, for it helped golf."

Hubbell Is Waiting

With the poorest record of his big league career, two games won and four lost, Carl Hubbell is patiently waiting for the return of the zip to his boney brown army. "It's a pretty bad feeling to be out there, getting hit, and knowing that once upon a time you had too much stuff for the fellows now hitting you," Hub was telling us after the all-star game. "Pitching's funny," he mused. "For instance I can make a ball break as much today as I ever could. But I can't make 'em break as fast, or as quick. That's what counts. I got to face the fact that I'm getting old, and that I haven't got the stuff I used to have. But, I dunno, my arm's been feeling so good the past few days that . . . maybe . . ."

Hub thinks the Reds have the best balanced club in his league, but he's not sure that they're going to win. "They've got an awful lot of fellows on that team who haven't been through the mill," he reasoned. "Nobody knows whether they'll stand up in a hot pennant fight, like a bunch of older players would."

Goldstein's Story

Ruby Goldstein's piece, in the forthcoming initial issue of Athlete is 100 per cent dynamite. With the aid of Sportswriter Dick McCann, the "Second Benny Leonard" tells a story that would be rejected by any movie company as too improbable to film. But it happened to this black-eyed gentle Ghetto boy who reaped a harvest in the golden era of sports, and spent it or lost it in the years that followed.

"One night, about 10 years ago, I was paid $22,500 for fighting one round at the Polo Grounds," he begins. "Today I am writing this story to pay my room rent, and the room isn't as big as my dressing room was that night."

It's a strange, sinister tale, of how he came up the ladder on the strength of a great right hand punch, how mobster Waxie Gordon bought a half share of him and took over his corner the night of the Ace Hudkins fight, to scream at him to knock out Hudkins because he, Gordon, had bet Nick the Greek $50,000 he would. He tells too of the night he lay horrified under a night club table and watched two men killed in a gun battle, and how the man who invested his last ring earnings in the busted bank of the United States now won't let him in his office.

It's the frankest, rawest story of its kind I've ever read.

Strong Field Entered in Washington Horse Show Today

27 Classes Listed for 2-Day Event

D.C. Well Represented By Margaret Cotter's Rocksie and Hughes' Black Caddy, Jumpers

By Anne Hagner.

Washington, Va., July 13.—The Rappahannock Horse Show tomorrow and Saturday at the show grounds near here, has attracted a top-flight field of hunters and jumpers, which will be making their last show ring appearances until the latter part of August.

Twenty-seven classes have been listed for the event, with entries representing the stables of Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh, who will show Billy Do, Sallyport, Sly Portia, Brown Bruin and Protest; Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Spring Hope, recent Culpeper champion, and Faithful Heart, The Bear, Airy Spirit, Two Leggins and Bon Diable; Mrs. D. N. Lee, with her flashy Helenist and Dr. Yates; Betty Couzens' Repulsion, completing a successful tour of the Virginia circuit before returning to Michigan; Eleanor Moffett, of Asheville, N. C., whose Candolette was twice a winner at the Washington show, and Mr. and Mrs. Haggin Perry's good hunter string.

An absentee in the open jumping ranks will be Betty Couzens' game little brown mare, Bonny, which became a victim to the dreaded horse ailment, heaves, and was destroyed Wednesday. However, some of the section's best open horses will be competing in the seven classes scheduled for them, with the District of Columbia well represented by Margaret Cotter's Rocksie, which prefers his fences set at 6 feet, and Fred Hughes, jr.'s, Black Caddy, another veteran of the stratosphere. These two champions will be competing with such Virginia favorites as H. H. Butz's 22-year-old Hobo with Malvern Bell up; Edgewood Farm's Redport, W. B. Bogert's Gay Cockade, and Mr. and Mrs. Haggin Perry's Santa Claus.

Hunter judges are Henry Laurence Bell of Bayside, Long Island, and Frank Bonsal, of Glyndon, Md.

left. But Case popped up and after Vernon walked, Sammy West left three of his pals holding the bag by tapping a ball back to Vernon.

Krakauskas escaped damage in the first inning after Clift led off with a double, because Clift was run down between third and second on Gallagher's grounder to Travis. But in the fourth inning, McQuinn knocked Krakky loose from a run by leading off the inning with his tenth homer of the season, a hoist to the right field roof.

Krakauskas was plainly showing no liking for the heat and was perspiring from every pore, and the Venezuelan, Alexandra, got the pitching job in the fifth. Alex promptly began to suffer from both the heat and the Browns.

He managed to get by the fifth inning, but with one out in the sixth, Alex surrendered four consecutive singles to the Browns. Clift singled past third base, Gallagher hit the first pitch for a single to left, Hoag hit the first pitch for a single to center, and Glenn singled through the box. The tying two runs were across by that time and two were out, Hoag having been retired when he tried to reach third on Glenn's hit. The Browns got no more runs out of the inning because Glenn went out stealing.

From the second inning to the seventh the Nats made only two useless singles off the reformed Kennedy, but in the seventh they made scoring motions when Vernon led off with a double that caromed off Heffner's glove into rightfield. West sacrificed Vernon to third and then the Nats blew their opportunity, Vernon being run down near the plate on Wright's grounder to Heffner with the infield drawn in. Travis followed with a futile single to center.

The use of a pinch-hitter in the eighth forced Alex out of the game and with Appleton on the mound in the latter half of the inning, and Bluege collaborating, the Browns pieced together the winning run.

Three fly balls to the outfield—by Vernon, Welaj and Wright—was the Nats' only answer in the ninth inning.

Antiques of Big Leagues Don Togs Again in Old-Timers' Game at Boston

National League old-timers gained a measure of balm for the defeat of their league in the 1939 All-Star game by beating a collection of American League ancients, 8-4, at Boston. Cards, Bees Divide Two, 5-3 and 3-1

Boston Outhits St. Louis in Both Games; Miller Homers

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 13.—The Boston Bees outhit the St. Louis Cardinals twice today but had to divide the double-header, dropping the opener, 5-3, and capturing the second game, 3-1.

The Bees slammed Curt Davis for 11 hits during his five and two-thirds innings on the mound in the first game to collect all of their runs. By that time, however, the Cards had belted Sailor Bill Posedel for 10 hits and all their tallies.

Deacon Danny MacFayden gave the opposition six hits in the second as his mates collected seven, including Eddie Miller's homer and Phil Masi's triple, which drove in the second run in the seventh. MacFayden then ended the day's scoring by bringing in Masi with a single before starter Lou Warneke was yanked for Clyde Shoun.

Macks Pile Up 22 Hits, Score in Every Inning After Fourth; Johnson Gets 4 Hits, Nagel and Rip Radcliff Make Homers

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 13.—A belated but rousing attack brought Philadelphia's Athletics from behind an 8-to-0 disadvantage today and gave them a 12-to-10 decision over the Chicago White Sox in the series opener.

The Athletics piled up 22 hits once they got their assault under way in the fifth inning, routing Ed Smith and Clint Brown as they continued to score in every inning thereafter. Bob Johnson contributed four singles and Bill Nagel a home run. Rip Radcliff homered for the Sox in the early surge that drove Nelson Potter, Athletics' starting pitcher, from the box.

Brown, making his thirty-second relief appearance in Chicago's 74 games, took over in the seventh with one on, none out, and the Sox still ahead, 8 to 4. He showed the effects of the relief grind and was battered for ten hits in two and one-third innings. It was his third setback against six triumphs in rescue roles.

Cubs Defeat Phillies, 7-5

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 13.—Scoring two runs in the ninth on Jim Gleeson's single and Carl Reynolds' long sacrifice fly, the Chicago Cubs came from behind tonight to beat the Phillies, 7 to 5, in a "grudge" battle that saw Hugh Mulcahy and Claude Passeau thrown out of the game for fighting.

A feud between the two clubs flared into the open when the opposing pitchers were banished.

The feud started Tuesday in New York when Gabby Hartnett, manager of the Cubs, failed to play the Phils lafefielder, Morrie Arnovich, and the National League's leading hitter in the all-star game.

Señor RICHARD ARMSTRONG Chief of International News Service CUBAN BUREAU

"In my years of newspaper work in Cuba I have come to know and love it as a second home. This new White Owl of yours has a genuine Havana taste plus a mildness that should be especially pleasing to Americans."

Richard Armstrong

The first and only Blended-with-Havana Cigar ever approved by Cuban smokers

DOWN IN HAVANA they really know the taste of Havana tobacco—you can bet on that. So we took the new Blended-with-Havana White Owl down there to test it. We selected prominent Cubans—real connoisseurs of cigars . . . gave them some of the new White Owls to smoke. Without exception they all praised the rich Havana flavor of this new cigar.

We feel awfully proud of this new cigar. We're proud of the Havana tobacco we use in it . . . it's a really good grade. Does that sound unbelievable for a 5¢ cigar? Well, we are America's largest buyers of Havana tobacco and we know what we are talking about. Fact is, it's the same type of Havana tobacco that is used in popular cigars costing 10¢ and more. And there's a generous helping of this tobacco in each White Owl, too.

We could go on and on telling you about the new White Owl, but the only way for you to find out how good it really tastes is to smoke one. If you enjoy a good cigar, try one of the new White Owls today. Your taste will tell you why it wins the honors—even in Havana.

Another "10¢" feature—now yours for 5¢ . . . a choice of shapes to suit your smoking taste. A long, trim, new Invincible. And a rich, full-bodied, new Club House shape. You get the same amount of tobacco—the same mild blend in either size—only the shape varies.

Royal Business Comes From Behind to Win Antietam 'Cap

Filly's Late Rush Defeats Roman Boy

Palumbo Rides Well; Winner Pays $7.20; Seplin, Victory Light Team for 'Double'

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent.

Hagerstown, Md., July 13.—Capt. Ewart Johnston's Royal Business with Jockey Sammy Palumbo riding, came from behind to score in the Antietam Handicap featuring the Thursday program at this turf center. The 4-year-old filly, carrying 115 pounds, closed with a brilliant rush that turned back Roman Boy, Charles Town sprint champion, by a length and a half. Caidon, in the colors of Jane Waugh, was third and two and a half lengths farther back. Four others, including Celtic Legend, a dissapointing favorite, competed in the test of six and a half furlongs.

Royal Business was a $7.20 shot to those in the crowd of 6,000 with her tickets and she was clocked in 1:21 3-5, capable time over a fast track. Just before the race a light rain set in which made the track a bit slippery but not enough to be considered "off."

Roman Boy, as expected, broke into the lead in the opening furlong and Jockey Skeets Holland booted him along in the front. Beaming Lady was second at this stage with Celtic Legend in third place.

A heavily played favorite and a lukewarm second choice teamed to produce a $20.50 mutuel in the daily double. E. R. Pike's Seplin won the first race under a good ride by Jockey Lou Machado and paid the favorite players a $3.50 mutuel. Victory Light, with a $200 price tag attached, took the second race in rather easy fashion.

SEPLIN, sent to front in opening furlong, drew clear and had to be kept to drive to stave off closing bid of NANCI'S BEST. The latter was away poorly, stumbled while working way to contention and closed with good energy under strong handling. POMPEY'S ROSE was roughed about in early stages and hung in closing quarter. DOCTOR'S NURSE could not keep up after breaking on top. NEGOPI and FAIR HAIRED were bumped at first turn.

VICTORY LIGHT, close up from start, came through on rail entering backstretch to set to front and drew out to win easily. SKYE LASSIE, hustled along on inside while challenged by BET WICK in early stages, finished with good courage, but was no match for winner. BET WICK was put to intermittent punishment early to force pace of SKYE LASSIE, but weakened thereafter. HAGERSTOWN JR. had to be rushed to get to contention and hung thereafter. ROAMING LADY had some early foot.

Daily Double, Seplin and Victory Light, Paid $20.50.

ADHELMAR had speed to open a long lead, withstood challenges of BEST POLICY and drew clear in stretch run under good handling. BEST POLICY was steadied along when unable to get to front in early stages, moved up strongly when asked, but was held safe by winner. TROSTAR was hard ridden while racing wide and closed gamely. HALO had early speed. CAN BLOOM pulled up lame. HAPPY MIRACLE tripped and fell at paddock turn.

At The Post

Hagerstown, Md., July 13.—
Dear Al:

A horse who breaks a leg on a race track generally is destroyed. Hyph, a mare owned by Ralph Frank, became an exception to the rule yesterday. In the fourth race one of her pins snapped but her owner decided to allow her to live. Her leg was placed in a cast and she will be used for breeding purposes next spring. She is 6 years old and by Twin K out of Bogie. Jockey Lou Machado suffered a wrenched back in the first race which he won aboard Seplin. Machado explained after the race that the juvenile "outbroke him" and when he snatched up to stay on he pulled a muscle in his back. He cancelled several mounts. If Buck Middleton had been sweet 16 today he could have cashed the daily double on his birthday hunch. After spending last month at Delaware Park, Tiger Finkelstein is renewing acquaintances here. Halo was purchased by S. H. Rogers before her race today. Al Boyle, president of Charles Town, is turning his attention to building the new West Virginia track, Waterford Downs, near Pittsburgh. He expects to have the new oval ready for a fall meeting. Frank Colley, who played sand lot base ball for the American Security and Trust Company in Washington, is sports editor of the local paper. Apprentice Jockey Charlie Walters, the Crisfield, Md., boy who figured in a spill today, escaped with a shaking up. He was aboard Happy Miracle when the filly stumbled and fell in the third race.

BILL.

First race—Snobbish Lady showed good speed and a liking for the track in winning over a cheaper field here opening day. The rider will be Garrett and the route is the same. Molasses Julia ran wide at the turns in the last and is dangerous if she stays in. Wagold for the show end.

Second race—Itsie Bitsie has the early speed that counts around these sharp turns. Performed well at Charles Town, and seems the best suited of this field. Misled breaks off the rail and should be in the thick of competition. Fred's Warning to take care of the others.

Third race—Lady Timarole showed a lot of foot at the West Virginia course and will be ready to run her race in this company. Gets in light and I'm going to string along. Kissin Kid belongs with this kind and would move up if the mud comes. Walli would be a factor if taken off the reserve list.

Fourth race—Tavern was something of a sprint champion at one stage of the Charles Town session. Should turn it on with this kind. Brainchild will like the route and should be close. Charming Boy is fit as those recent victories suggest.

Fifth race—Trixie Lass gets in action here with feather weight. Breaks off the rail and has the speed to take the top. All routes looked alike to Best Policy at the other town and this one could win in this field. Trivet was consistent before coming here and will be a keen factor.

Sixth race—Mad Dash galloped off with a purse when meeting slightly cheaper company. A much-improved horse this year and deserves attention. Bright Light probably is best but one has to gamble on his getting away from the post. Prince Pettie could awake.

Seventh race — Channing had plenty of hard luck at the other town. Figures with this kind and I'm going to take my chances. Sea Finn is dangerous at the route. Cora Kay and Jimmy D, will draw plenty of backing.

Best bet—Itsie Bitsie.

Bill Ackerman's Column

Hardheads continue the main standby for bay and river anglers. The schools have scattered, as they have a habit of doing in mid-summer, sticking to the deeper waters during the heat of the day and running the flats and shoaler waters at night, but there are so many of them this year that it seems to be no trick at all to catch them at any time.

ACKERMAN

And in their taking, an oddity we haven't noted for a half a dozen years, even the smallest will put up a real battle. On bait-casting tackle or light steel rods it is not to be sneered at by the most particular fisherman.

There isn't much choice as to the best place to go to catch hardheads, for they seem to be just as numerous at the head of salt water as in the lower bay. For closeby places, the catches taken by Solomons Island boats on the edge of the channel between Cove Point and Cedar Point seem to be slightly ahead of those at other well known places, with The Gooses running a close second. The difference might well be only in our reports.

They are taking a few small trout also at Solomons, and good catches of Norfolk spot at Little Cove Point, the largest running about ¾ of a pound. Bloodworms are the only bait, and must be obtained here in town. They are not to be had down there at any time.

Bill Deirs, of First Precinct, gets his angling enjoyment fishing for sharks; and usually follows it in the Cape Charles section of Virginia. Last week his best effort was a 9½ footer. And the fact that his favored going was so good was also ample reason for not catching trout and other smaller fish, for with the big fellows around small fry are slow about taking the hook.

This week the fishing in this area has improved considerably, particularly for cobia. Capt. Bryan Travis has been catching quite a few of these battlers, weighing from 25 to 70 pounds.

Edison Farquhar, with a Washington party fishing this week with Capt. Richardson out of Cape Charles, got a 52-pounder that extended his husky 17 years to the limit. Another weighing 43 pounds, and 45 fine trout were also caught.

There is little doubt in our mind that not only white but big blue marlin as well will be taken off the coast of Virginia, for already two fish have been taken off Hatteras Inlet, N. C., that compare favorably with the best of the "Bahama blues." Hugo Rutherford has been following this fishing for the past two years. Paul Townsend with his Jacpau III, captained by Bill Hatch, expects to give it a try within the next few days and when such experienced big-game fishermen and guides spend their time on it there is something more than conjecture behind the idea.

Good Marlin Grounds

Keeping in mind the blue marlin on one side and the white marlin of Maryland's famous Jack Spot and Winter Quarter Shoals on the other, it isn't hard to believe that somewhere along the many miles of Virginia coastline good marlin grounds will be found.

Believing this, we would rather see Capt. Cass exploring the offshore waters at and below the Virginia Capes instead of close to Winter Quarter, where it seems likely these seven marlin were taken, and where no pioneering work is needed. For every one of the Ocean City guides knows these waters like a book and just when marlin might be expected to be found there.

These guides have built a marlin fleet, surpassed only by those of southern Florida, and composed of boats equipped down to the last small detail for the long extended runs offshore and out of sight of land. They are even installing this year marine telephones, not only for the added safety of their charters, but so that they can better follow the run of marlin, which moves, according to the direction of the wind, from Winter Quarter Shoals on the south to Fenwick Shoals to the north.

D. C. Anglers

Several days of heavy weather slowed up the catches of white marlin at Ocean City, but now that it has settled, there is little doubt but what it will pick up right where it left off last Friday when 41 fish were brought in to establish a new port record.

From the reports, it looks as though half the anglers in Washington move down to this little seashore resort over each week-end. Bucky Harris is expected down to fish on the Jacpau III with Jack and Paul Townsend. Floyd Akers and Lawrence Richey will be guests aboard Fred T. Rook's Chocataw. Milton Gordon is fishing Sunday with "Capt." Billy Savage from his 16-foot seaskiff, which Capt. Crawford tows off to the Jack Spot and turns loose. Bill Briggs, Eastern Air Lines local traffic manager, is going to try to hook one fair this week-end—he's fed up with his membership in the Tailfirst Club. Bill Coyle, local sports commentator, is sailing with Capt. Vic Lance on his Torabill, up from Palm Beach this season for the first time. Leslie Cooper, Harry Sollers—even Bob Wilson—is going back this week-end.

On Tuesday Dan Stebbins, well known Atlantic City angler, caught a 96-pound fish in 50 minutes. L. P. Kent, a Washington angler fishing with Capt. Jim Lombard on his Jim Dandie, landed one weighing 68 pounds. These were the only two marlin brought in although Capt. Lev Raymond, after a long run offshore, had six strikes near Winter Quarter on the way back. The fish, however, weren't taking the bait after the strike. A habit they often exhibit when the water is cold.

Casting Tourney

The baitcasting and fly casting tournament being staged by the National Capital Casting Club for the Eastern Association Scientific Angling Clubs gets under way tomorrow at 8 a. m. at the Lincoln Memorial Reflecting Pool. There is a banquet at Hogates in the evening and another all day session on Sunday.

The events on Saturday are salmon fly, distance fly, ⅜-ounce distance plug and ⅝ distance plug. Lee Sens, world's champion at Columbus last year, will be competing in the distance events in the afternoon.

On Sunday it starts off with the wet fly accuracy, ⅜-ounce accuracy and the ⅝ accuracy. The dry fly accuracy at 3:00 p. m. will be the last event.

Such local stars as Harold Vermeule, Jay Reed, Dr. Bill Holton, Glenn Reynolds, Lou Gramlich, George Cook and Chuck Johnson, will be out there for the home club, doing their best to keep as many of the swell trophies here in Washington as is possible.

Pompano Arriving

Pompano, one of the gamest of the smaller Florida fishes that come north in varying numbers each summer to provide sport for surfmen, have arrived. Several have been taken as far up as Cape May, on the Jersey coast. Somewhat earlier than usual, it is just another indication that this season is a bit ahead.

Each season the pompano, fish of the gourmet, is caught by net fishermen in Maryland in amounts from a couple of hundred to nearly a thousand pounds. That more are not taken in the surf is the fault of the angler. They just don't fish for them. Their taking on a hook is slightly more involved than that of the king or trout. Bait casting tackle with small hook and light gut snood, and sand fleas for bait; and fished in the outer edge of the surf. They are occasionally caught from boats and with other baits.

Bass fishermen have certainly been bothered with the proverbial ants, because they haven't been able to get started on their pet pastime since the first few days of the season.

This week-end, providing there are no further rains, will more than likely give them a good chance to get going, for most of the waters were clearing fast early in the week.

Bass Waters Clear

Swain's Lock, reached by way of Potomac, is a good close-by place. Robert Swain has boats at the usual buck a day, and in addition is trying to keep a more than normal supply of bait on hand. This section of the river is usually fishable on either one side or the other. Even last week it was clear enough to fish with minnows.

Smithsonian Institute collectors are puzzled by specimens of large rats they trapped on Smith Island (sometimes called Baldhead), near Southport, N. C., during a recent three-day foray into the tropical growth of its 17,000 acres. No one in the party could identify the rodents, even though the body and legs are definitely those of a rat. The teeth, head and ears are those of a squirrel, with the tail more like that of an opossum than of a rat. In addition, the animals seemed to be arboreal, for all of the dozen specimens were taken in traps nailed in trees.

Ed Bowen, at Solomons, has been getting more green shrimp than he can use. Yet he isn't catching any of the big stripers. What he needs is a good angler to show him just how it is done.

Most of the entries in the G. C. Murphy Outstanding Fish Contest continue to be those of bass. One notable exception—the 51½-pound black drum caught by Theodore Entwisle, of 2600 Branch street southeast. He also has a leg up on the big bronze cup of the Neptune Grill for the largest fish caught in bay waters. It was taken in the mouth of the Choptank River.

Registered Tourney At Washington Gun Club

A registered tournament with 100 16-yard targets and 50 handicap targets will be staged by the Washington Gun Club July 22 at the club range. In the 100-target race, including three classes, a trophy will be given to first and second high guns on the 100, and a trophy will be given to high gun in each class.

Man of the Month

By Walter Johnson.

(WJSV-General Mills Broadcaster.)

Charley Gelbert makes the greatest single gain in the Man of the Month contest for July following his outstanding performance with the Nats in their defeat by the Browns yesterday.

To Gelbert, seven points, because he produced all three of the Nats' runs with his homer when two were on base.

To Buddy Myer, one point, because his single put him on base ahead of Gelbert's homer in the second inning.

To Cecil Travis, one point, because he drew a walk before Gelbert hit his homer and because he made one of the Nats' eight hits.

To Joe Krakauskas, one point, because he held the Browns to a single run in the four innings he pitched, and also contributed a single. The totals:

Cecil Travis	15	Ken Chase	4
Taft Wright	12	Rick Ferrell	4
Charley Gelbert	11	George Case	4
Dutch Leonard	10	Jake Early	3
Buddy Myer	9	Mickey Vernon	2
Joe Krakauskas	8	Tony Giuliani	2
Johnny Welaj	7	Joe Haynes	2
Sammy West	7	Bob Prichard	2
Jim Bloodworth	7	Bobby Estalella	1
Buddy Lewis	5

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Two Hollywoodites Outdo One Mr. Jules Verne!

Producer and His Star-Wife Are in a Hurry; 'Daughters' and 'Mr. Chips' Are Held Over; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

THEY CAN CALL IT a vacation if they want to, but to many it will appeal as more of an endurance contest. I have in mind the European junket just completed by Producer Arthur Hornblow, jr., and his actress wife, Myrna Loy. Mr. and Mrs. Hornblow have only this week wound up 15,000 miles of travel in 30 days flat. This desk once did about half that distance in the same length of time and thought it was stepping around these United States with some briskness. That, however, was before the day of commercial airlines and streamlined trains, so our transportation sometimes lagged a little.

BELL

In case you ever have to cover 15,000 miles in a month—and get a few important chores done along the way—this is how it has been done at least once.

The Hornblows traveled from Hollywood to New York by air, to Paris aboard the S. S. Normandie, to Stockholm and Oslo by air, through Norway by motor car and water, from Bergen to Newcastle by ship, thence to London by train and, finally, back to America from Southampton aboard the Normandie, a skiff which they evidently fancy.

In London, the producer and his stellar spouse—although on another Hollywood lot—were guests at the British premiere of Mr. Hornblow's recently released "Man About Town," starring Jack Benny, Dorothy Lamour and Edward Arnold, the picture to be seen next, incidentally, on the screen at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater. When they landed in New York this week, they found the film entering its third consecutive week at the Paramount Theater on Broadway.

The return to the West Coast of the touring speed merchants was hastened by the necessity of Mr. Hornblow's giving his personal approval to the edited print of his recently completed picture of "The Cat and the Canary," co-starring Bob Hope and Paulette Goddard, and arranging for its gala preview at an early date.

But you would have thought he would have known all that before he started out. Perhaps he did and merely thought the quick trip would get him an item in a paper somewhere—which, of course, it never will!

Speaking of the Earle Theater and "Man About Town," it will be necessary to wait another week for what is described as the best screen vehicle Jack Benny has ever had. This is due to the fact that "Daughters Courageous," with the Lane sisters, Gale Page, John Garfield, Claude Rains and the original cast of "Four Daughters," is too good. So keen has been the interest in this springtly film and so great the attendance during its first week on Thirteenth street that it is being continued for a second week at the Earle, beginning today. "Daughters Courageous" thus steps up into that select list that includes "The Adventures of Robin Hood," "You Can't Take It With You," "Juarez" and precious few other camera dramas under the Earle's present policy. The "Lake Placid Ice Show," on the stage, and the other features of the current bill also will be retained for the second week.

Doris Rankin, who 20 years ago was Lionel Barrymore's leading woman in "The Copperhead," one of the outstanding successes of his stage career, rejoined him for the first time in what is looked upon as one of his most notable screen productions. That would be "On Borrowed Time," coming to Loew's Palace following the extended engagement of Robert Donat and Greer Garson in "Good-by, Mr. Chips," currently delighting capacity audiences. In "On Borrowed Time," Miss Rankin is seen as Mrs. Burlingame, the sheriff's wife.

But that is not the chief interest of the item. Doris Rankin was the first Mrs. Lionel Barrymore. They were divorced and the senior member of the "royal family" married the late Irene Fenwick. Now the first Mr. and Mrs. Lionel Barrymore will be seen together again after the lapse of all those years.

The postman is bearing up well these hot days. A letter postmarked Pasadena, from Phil Regan, the singing actor, announces the completion of his latest picture, "She Married a Cop," and the beginning of his next, "Flight by Midnight." When that is finished, he is bringing Mrs. Regan and all of the little Regans East to see Washington again and, incidentally, the New York World's Fair.

From Ball's Camps, Grand Lake Stream, Me., Manager Eddie Plohn, of the National, postage-cards, "As only the rich can afford this life, I am at a loss to understand how I came to be here with Leonard Bergman in a perfect fisherman's paradise."

And Irving Shapiro, rewarded with a trip home to Boston for his recent record-breaking week at the Mount Vernon Auto Theater, drops a card from an Eastern airliner, confessing, "Took the fastest way out of Washington, lest the boss should change his mind."

Well, as least some of the lads are going places. Personally, I still like Hains Point.

"Cast Aside," that lachrymose old ballad that is being so picturesquely rendered an an entr'acte out at the Roadside Theater this week—and presumably next—was written by Charles K. Harris, author of "After the Ball," "Just Break the News to Mother" and many other hit songs of the turn of the century. The number was made available to the Roadsiders by Luther C. Steward, head of the National Federation of Federal Employes, who has found time in a busy life to assemble the most complete collection of songs of the '80's, '90's and early 1900's to be found anywhere in the country. So now you know.

Ted Meza, the Earle's skating comic in the "Lake Placid Ice Show," has performed throughout America, Europe and the Antipodes. What you may not know about him is that he is a product of the musical revue stage. He appeared in "My Girl," "Rio Rita," "Rose Marie" and other well known productions before ever strapping on his skates. How he has survived this long on blades without breaking his neck is one of the mysteries of the theater.

Military-Strategy Note

Despite the superior numbers of the army of underpassers, Maj. Gen. George H. Thomas and his horse have reoccupied the fortified position in the center of Thomas circle and now, once again, stare victoriously down Fourteenth street. Or had you noticed?

Another Courageous Daughter

ROSEMARY LANE,

who, with her sisters, Lola and Priscilla, and Gale Page account for the title roles in the Warner Brothers' production of "Daughters Courageous," engaging the same cast as appeared in its predecessor, "Four Daughters." "Daughters Courageous" will be held over for a second week at the Earle Theater, beginning today.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, July 13.

ERROR: James Joyce's new book, "Finnegan's Wake," confused not only the critics with its double-talk wordage but almost drove the copy readers mad . . . Joyce read the proofs, made the corrections and finally received the corrected proof . . . "That word on Page 155 still is misspelled," he cabled. "You spelled it 'Semperexcommunicambiembisumers.' That's wrong. Correct it to 'Semperexcommunicambiambisumers.'"

FEAR: Joyce is very much afraid of thunder and lightning. And, so, when his wife persuaded him to take a vacation he consulted all charts and records—and learned that in Amsterdam thunderstorms are rarer than in any other city in Europe . . . Joyce, therefore, went to Amsterdam, but stayed there only one day—because on the day he arrived lightning hit the steeple of the church across the street from his hotel.

ENTERPRISE: Col. de Basil of the Monte Carlo Ballet tried to interest Billy Rose into taking over the operation and management . . . Rose then went to Eleanor Holm and asked her: "How'd you like to be a patroness?" . . . "Okay," she agreed—accompanied him to a performance of the Ballet and then told him: "It's lousy" . . . Billy, nevertheless, continued the negotiations, particularly when Col. de Basil assured him: "It will give you great prestige" . . . but the deal never was consummated, because Rose proposed: "Your share will be the prestige and my share will be all—but ALL—the money."

MYSTERY: Last week Roger Babson's Weekly included a remarkable foreign section—remarkable in that it was so different from the usual reactionary contents of Babson's publication . . . Even the Daily Worker commented upon it favorably . . . Mr. Babson still isn't aware of the fact that the man who wrote that foreign section is Elliot Paul, the author of "The Life and Death of a Spanish Town."

EXPENSE: Frances Brice, daughter of Fannie Brice, sometimes finds herself stammering—and so Fannie sent her to a psychoanalyst, who suggested: "I want you to speak out whatever you're thinking of right now. Go ahead—speak whatever thought is in your mind" . . . Frances remained silent, and reported this to her mother. "But why didn't you tell him what you were thinking of?" asked Fannie . . . "I couldn't," her daughter protested. "I kept thinking: 'This is costing $50 an hour, this is costing $50 an hour.'"

CHANGE: Margalo Gillmore, who is featured in "No Time for Cmedy," interviewed an applicant for a job in her household . . . "Why are you leaving your present job?" Miss Gillmore asked. "Because my employer is leaving for the South," the young lady answered . . . "The South?" Margalo repeated. "But the season hasn't begun there yet" . . . "It has for him," was the reply. "His name is Byrd. Richard E. Byrd."

CHATTER: Jack Kirkland's "I Must Love Some One" may be transferred from Broadway to the Bucks County Playhouse . . . Sam Rosoff is telling his friends that his new subway job will be completed a year ahead of schedule . . . Application for a commutation in the Scutellaro "Poormaster" case will be made at the September meeting of the Board of Pardons . . . Arrangements were being made the other night for Lillian Roth to make her first appearance as a band leader at the International Casino's Terrace Cafe.

YOUTH: Gertrude Stein is writing is writing a new Gertrude Stein a new book is writing is writing Gertrude a new a new a new . . . Anyway, Gertrude Stein is writing a new book, for children . . . "But how," she was asked, "can your work possibly be read by children?" "Easily," Miss Stein assured. "Because it will be published in blue type on pink paper."

DEFEAT: George Givot, the Greek dialectician, is very anxious to play the role of Nick the Greek in a movie based upon the gambler's career . . . Givot met Nick and asked permission to make a personal study of the character he might portray . . . "The part of Nick the Greek will never be played by any one but Nick the Greek," replied Nick, "—and I'm no actor."

SPEECH: Martin Beck, the producer, was told that Darryl Zanuck was planning another movie based upon the career of Capt. Dollar, founder of the Dollar Line . . . "If you were Zanuck," Beck was asked, "would you give the job to J. Edward Bromberg, who played Capt. Dollar in the Broadway production?" . . . "I saw Bromberg do it. He's a great actor, but he played it with a dialect," was Beck's criticism. "The way Bromberg played it, it wasn't the Dollar Line. It was more like the Bernstein Line."

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, July 13 (INS).—In the opinion of Hal Wallis, who came home today after a European trip, it won't be long before American pictures are reinstated in Italy. He says the people themselves hiss and boo the Italian-made pictures, calling loudly for their American favorites, and Mussolini, who naturally wants to keep favor with all classes, won't be able much longer to deny them the right to see the stars they like.

LOUELLA PARSONS

While in Sweden, Hal was taken through the Nobel Institute by the 70-year-old nephew of its founder. He has agreed to let Warners film the life of his uncle and it is interesting that before the agreement was reached three of Paul Muni's pictures, "Pasteur," "Zola" and "Juarez," were shown. They consented, then, to let Warners make the picture, provided Muni played the part, and it is more than likely that some of the scenes will be made in Nobel's native Sweden.

The Hays' office wins out on the "Green Hell" title. Harry Edington, the producer, and Frances Marion, the writer, have changed it to "South of the Amazon," so there won't be any rumbles over Harry's first production job. James Whale, whose direction of "The Man in the Iron Mask" was the subject of much favorable conversation, has agreed to megaphone it. The starting date is set for August 10. But that isn't the half of it. Joan Bennett and Douglas Fairbanks, jr., headline the cast, which will include other W. K. names. Harry also will not only have Frances Marion's script, but her good advice, which is money in the bank for any movie company.

There is sentiment in the possible selection of Nazimova to play Mrs. Danvers, the sinister housekeeper, in "Rebecca." Her very first picture, "War Brides," was made by David Selznick's father and, in its day, was one of the most successful of all the wartime dramas. Nazimova comes as an entirely unexpected choice for Mrs. Danvers, but David told me at the Warner wedding, where I had talked with him, that he thought she would be very good and hoped the test would be what they expected. He is making another test of Rene Ray for Mrs. De Winter and today Nova Pilbeam, the little British actress, sent her own test from London to the Selznick Studios.

Chatter in Hollywood: Don't be surprised if Raymond Massey arrives in Hollywood a bridegroom. Come this Saturday night, he leaves "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" and the rumor around New York is "that somewhere en route from New York to Hollywood Mrs. Dorothy Whitney, Eastern socialite with whom his name has been linked, will become Mrs. M. I was also interested to hear that while Raymond is doing the film version of "Abe" for RKO, he'll be succeeded in the stage play by Richard Gaines, whose wife is Brenda Marshall, one of the new Warner Brothers' bets.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Audrey Henderson moves to Reno to divorce Ben Edwards and her next husband, 'tis said, is an advertising man by the name of Wells; Mrs. Jean Bello (Little Harlow's attractive mother) and Heinie Brand not missing a laugh at a night spot; difficult to say whether Hedy Lamarr or her two great danes like ice cream better. They eat two quarts a day and she does almost as well; John Howard recuperating from a tonsilectomy at the Queen of the Angels Hospital; the prettiest bride Hollywood has seen in months was H. M. Warner's daughter, Betty May. She and her youthful bridegroom, Milton Sperling, stood for hours, receiving the hundreds of guests who attended the reception. Doris Leroy (Mrs. Mervin) had almost as many compliments as the bride, in her white maid-of-honor frock, with a coronet of flowers in her hair.

The beach house where Bebe Daniels gave so many parties, both before and after her marriage to Ben Lyon, opened for one night. The occasion, a buffet supper for the Ray Smiths of London; Bert Wheeler and Frank Fay back in Hollywood talking things over at a cafe; Mary Martin (of "My Heart Belongs to Daddy" fame) and Shirley Ross renewing an old acquaintance at the Beverly Hills pool; Bob Ritchie's latest heart-throb seems to be June Gale, if three dates running is any indication; Astrid Allwyn was badly bitten by her two schnausers, when she tried to separate them in a fight.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Difficult Choice

In her latest vehicle, "Panama Lady," Lucile Ball is cast in the title role as a penniless cabaret entertainer who must choose between going to jail and accompanying an adventurous engineer into the jungles of Central America.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., July 13.—(Douglas Shearer, sound director of M.-G.-M. and brother of Norma, gives us some lowdown on his tough problems.—H. H.)

By Douglas Shearer.

The sound engineer is daily called upon to perform some feat of scientific magic. One day he will be called on to devise a recording machine so light that it can be carried by pack mule to the tops of the Sierras or in an airplane. The next he'll be asked to record the microscopic buzz of a mosquito. Tiny things work great havoc in sound.

A strange problem was giving voices to 125 midgets. These, the Munchkins in "The Wizard of Oz" were provided with voices to match the characters of the gnomelike creatures in the story. We did it by reversing sound procedure. For years we tried to prevent distortion. For the Munchkins we deliberately distorted voices, by electrical vibrations, changing the speed of recorded sound tracks, and thus each midget got a different type of eccentric voice Sound has certainly improved since the early days. Do you remember, Hedda, the day we made "The Last of Mrs. Cheney" and traced an old crackling in the microphone to the stiff silk dress Norma was wearing, and had the wardrobe department line it with flannel? Well, little problems like that arise constantly.

Not long ago Walter Pidgeon and Ilka Chase played ping pong on a wooden table while Virginia Bruce looked on. Conversation went on during the game, a scene in "Stronger than Desire." The ping of the ball cut into dialogue. We tried cloth on the table but the ball wouldn't bounce. We tried a rubber ball, it was too "dead" to work in the game. Finally decided that ping pong wouldn't do without the pings, so took a chance. Luckily it came out all right.

Many little problems we licked by experience. We know that deadening a window sill with blotting paper prevents falling rain from "popping." We know that hammering "telegraphs" sound to the microphone. Eleanor Powell and a group of dancers tapped havoc into an adjoining sound stage one day, until we traced the fire prevention sprinkler pipe and found it ran from her hall to the sound stage and carried in the sound of her merrily tapping toes.

There's also a personal element. The first time we recorded Dallies Franz, the pianist, we had an odd reedy sound in the music. We tested the piano. It was perfect. We examined the floor boards, then Mike McLaughlin modulating the recording, happened to watch the pianist. He unconsciously hummed what he played, very softly. In a concert it didn't matter. Nobody noticed it. But the microphone picked it up. You see, Hedda, humans have brains that focus on what we want to hear and ignore other sounds. You carry on a conversation on the street car and never notice street noises. They call it the factor of attention. The microphone hasn't this human gift of selecting what it wants to hear.

Jeanette MacDonald used to unconsciously sway her body in time to her songs. It changed the distance from her mouth to the microphone and gave an undulating effect. Now we place a chair before the microphone, its back to her, at the proper position, and she leans against it, holding the back of the chair. Then she can't sway.

Eleanor Powell taps time with her toes when she sings into the microphone. So we put her on a soft rubber mat and let her tap away. We traced a swishing sound in an orchestra to a long whiplike baton Conductor Herbert Stothart was using, the swish cut through the air when he used it vigorously in crescendo passages. It's all simple when the source of extraneous sound is located. Sometimes it's a tough job locating it.

There's a lot besides decibels, microvolts and such things in this game of recording sound. But it's mighty interesting!

Cotton Futures Yield to Active Liquidation

New York, July 13 (AP).—A nervous trade in cotton futures today resulted from absence during trading hours of news from Washington regarding the meeting between Secretary Wallace and leading cotton men on export subsidy plans.

Closing losses of 4 to 6 points followed active liquidation in July, which goes off the board tomorrow, and hedging sales and professional selling in new crop deliveries.

Heavy buying developed in May in late trading when foreign brokers bid for that contract at slightly below market levels. The demand was finally satisfied by sale of large blocks by New Orleans accounts and ring professionals.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures again headed for the bottom today before enough buying appeared to carry prices back to the plus side. The final range was net unchanged to 4 points higher on sales of 271 contracts.

Covering deals by some early sellers, plus investment buying, were factors in the upturn.

July closed at *5.95; September, 5.98; October, *6.05; December, *6.13; January, 6.18.

Crude brokers said oil had sold late yesterday and early today at 5 cents in the Southeast and Valley and Texas on the basis of 4¾ to 4⅞ cents.

Wheat Prices Hold Despite Heavy Selling

Late Rally Cuts Early Losses of About One Cent

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 13.—Although the grain pits absorbed another wave of selling today which sent wheat, corn, rye and soy bean futures to new seasonal low prices, the market righted itself before the close.

Losses of about a cent from early highs of about ¾ cent from yesterday's closing figures were wiped out in the final hour wheat trade rally and prices finished near the day's highs, or unchanged to ⅝ higher compared with yesterday. July and September contracts were quoted at 65⅝-½ and 66⅝-½ respectively compared with lows of 64⅛ and 65⅝.

Corn tumbled about 1½ cents from early highs but closed only ½-¾ lower than yesterday with July 44⅝-½, September 45⅝-¾. Oats suffered net losses of ½-¾ cent, rye ¾-⅝ cent, soy beans 1⅛ to 5¼ cents and lard gained 5 cents. At the day's low of 43⅜, July corn was the lowest it has been in six years.

Wash. Gas Petitions For Suburban Firms

The Washington Gas Light Company yesterday filed their fifth petition with the Public Utilities Commission to acquire the Hyattsville and Alexandria gas companies.

The petition, filed in response to an offer by the commission, calls for issuance of 35,000 shares of common stock, valued at $1,050,000, to be paid the Washington & Suburban Co., the parent trust which owns all three utilities.

As a result of a recent public hearing on the fourth petition, the commission turned down the company's offer to pay $1,250,000 to the parent trust but indicated it would approve the $1,050,000 figure. The local company stated in the petition the parent trust would pay the cost of registration and issuance of the stocks.

Engineering Awards 55% Over Last Week

New York, July 13 (AP).—Engineering construction awards for the week ended Tuesday totaled $58,003,000, up 55 per cent from the preceding holiday week and 13 per cent greater than the same week a year ago, Engineering News-Record reported today.

Private construction, although 12 per cent below the corresponding week last year, attained the highest level in five weeks. Total awards for the year to date were $1,652,776,000, a gain of 19½ per cent over the same period a year ago.

Phillips Petroleum To Redeem Note Issue

New York, July 14 (AP).—Phillips Petroleum Co., today called all its privately held notes, totaling $12,000,000, for payment August 1, although they are not due until 1942-1945 inclusive. The action permits the company to take advantage of lower interest rates.

Of the total, $9,000,000 was refinanced privately on a three-year basis, thereby reducing the private loans by $3,000,000. Previously this year, another $3,000,000 was liquidated from current funds. Aside from the $9,000,000 private debt, the company has outstanding $25,000,000 of 3 per cent convertible debentures sold last fall.

Stocks Advance in Quiet Rally; Trading Volume Nears Million Shares; Rail Issues Lead Bond Trading

New York, July 13.—The upswing in the stock market played a return performance today, leaders rising 1 to more than 2 points and the composite average adding another 0.37 point. The pace at the opening was the best since April 10 and about 45 per cent of the day's activity was packed into the first hour. The total volume of 945,460 shares exceeded that of the previous day and thus helped along the current improvement in sentiment.

Most of the progress came in the first hour, but prices held well throughout the balance of the session. There were several opening blocks of from 1,000 to 3,000 shares.

Chartists Expect Reaction

Initial advances were sufficiently higher than the best of the previous day to create a slight gap on the daily chart. It is the belief of technical followers of the stock market that when such gaps are created they are filled in within a few days. Such was the case when a gap was created on the downside in the latter half of May. If the same should hold true in the present case it would involve a moderate reaction.

It has been so long since the Street has enjoyed a forward movement as pronounced as that of today and Wednesday that many brokers are advising their customers to be cautious and to take some of their profits. This does not necessarily mean a reversal in the trend of the market, but merely that they look for some leveling off after the current bulge.

Loft Most Active

The breadth of the market expanded with the greater volume, a total of 794 individual shares being traded in on the big board. There were 36 that scored new highs for 1939. Loft was the most active, followed by United States Rubber, Chrysler, Motors and Anaconda, each of which added a fraction. Steels turned in the best group performance, followed by the metals and rails.

PWA Strike Stand Holds

Factors influencing prices continued to favor the bullish side today. There was no indication that the Government will back down in its first stand against the WPA strike. While President Roosevelt went into conference with an important executive of the A. F. of L., presumably with the intention of finding some way to break the strike, the attitude of the public is leaning more and more to the belief that this situation will rapidly cure itself.

The doubtful value of the projects which are tied up and the fact that the work is largely of a nature to suit the particular aptitude of the workers who need relief, means that any discontinuance of such work will be a boon to the taxpayers. The attitude of a growing number of investors and taxpayers is that the sooner the entire WPA organization folds up, to be superceded by public works and direct relief, the sooner we will be able to deal with the problem of mounting taxation.

Fading War Fears Help

Quiet on the European front also added a share to the better sentiment noted in the financial district and the midweek business news leaned to the favorable side. Many of the indices are not exactly comparable, on account of the inclusions of the July 4 holiday, but figures are running ahead of a year ago. The review of the steel industry indicated that while steel production has not regained the loss of the holiday week, it was back to 50 per cent of capacity in the face of the strike of tool and die makers of the General Motors plants. Bank clearings recovered from the holiday influence and showed a slight gain over 1938. Engineering construction for week ended July 13 was reported by Enginering News-Record as 23 per cent higher than a year ago and 55 per cent over the preceding week. Carloadings for the week ended July 2 reflected the holiday, falling 106,419 cars, or 16 per cent, but they were up 58,128 cars over the like period last year.

Some of the best gains today came in less active leaders. American Smelting added a point. Allied Chemical showed a 2 point advance, as did Union Carbide, and Johns Manville was up 2½.

Bond Trading Quiet

Investment and speculative issues alike made a little progress in another quiet listed bond market session, today. Numerous flotations of high grade bonds are expected next week, which acts as a drag for the moment on the outstanding securities. But United States Treasury bonds advanced slightly, which gave a good tone also to best corporate obligations. The speculative sections of the market continued to follow equities slightly higher. Foreign dollar bonds attracted attention. Turnover in all issues amounted only to $5,440,000.

New Issues Expected

As final arrangements were being made for some of the large new issues of next week, trading in best rated bonds hardly moved at all, but the intermediate-dated obligations showed small gains. Guaranteed bonds were neglected. Telephone issues and best rails were steady in the corporate department. The leading power and light bonds advanced, where changed, and some gains also were registered in highly rated industrials.

Rail Issues in Demand

Medium priced railroad bonds that continue to pay interest were in quiet demand. Offerings were scarce and the occasional trades resulted in gains ranging from fractions to two points. Borderline and default rails showed rather good results. Alleghany Corporation issues advanced sharply, apparently because of the news regarding holdings of the stock. Utility holding issues also were good, while industrial convertibles did well on the advances of related equities. Local tractions, communications issues and other special groups were firm.

Foreigns Fairly Steady

Latin-American default bonds were in fair request in the foreign section. Brazilian issues being the favorites. German bonds showed gains and Polish issues were steady, while Italian and Japanese issues merely drifted. Fresh advances developed in the highly rated bonds of Scandinavia, Belgium, Canada and Australia.

Bank Clearings Slightly Above Previous Week

Total for 22 Cities Is 2.9% Over 1938 Period

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 13.—Up slightly over the preceding holiday period, bank clearings for the latest week displayed a small gain over the corresponding 1938 week, following the slight loss recorded in the year-to-year comparison a week ago.

Total clearings for 22 leading cities for the week ended July 12, according to Dun & Bradstreet, amounted to $5,132,970,000, compared with $4,989,968,000 for the same 1938 week, an increase of 2.9 per cent.

Clearings for the July 12 weeek rose $94,358,000 over the total for the week previous, which contrasted with a decrease of $97,532,000 between the two similar weeks of 1938.

Due to Saturday bank closing during July and August in New York, clearings for that city represent only five days' business. The total for the week aggregated $3,059,703,000, against $3,074,878,000 for the six days last year, giving a drop of 0.5 per cent. This was the sixth successive yearly decline recorded at New York. The turnover for the 21 cities excluding New York amounted to $2,073,267,000, a rise of 8.3 per cent over the $1,915,090,000 for the like week a year ago.

Bank clearings at leading cities, together with percentage gains over last week, follow:

Business Index Lower for Week

New York, July 13 (AP).—Time Magazine's index of business conditions rose again last week to 94.4 compared with 94.1 the previous week and 94.8 a year ago. Receipt of complete information for the previous week, which included the Fourth of July holiday, caused a revision of the index from the estimated figure of 93.3 to 94.1.

The index, which is based on money and banking figures, is designed to report not on business activity but on changes in underlying conditions likely to affect the volume of U. S. business

Young Releases 463,813 Shares of Alleghany Corp.

New York, July 13 (AP).—Disposal by Robert R. Young, chairman of Alleghany Corporation, of 463,813 shares of Alleghany Corporation was revealed in a statement filed by Young with the Securities & Exchange Commission and made public here today.

Of the stock involved, 367,500 shares were returned on May 5 to the George and Frances Ball Foundation to meet a note for $2,375,000 due on that date. This note, given by Young and his associates when they acquired Alleghany control from the Ball interests two years ago, was secured by the Alleghany shares.

The remaining 96,313 shares was recorded as disposed of May 26. It was returned by Young to Allan P. Kirby, a member of the Young syndicate in the Alleghany Corporation purchase.

After these transfers, the holdings of Young, his family and friends were reported still considerable. Young's family alone, it was understood, owns more than 28,000 shares of Alleghany Corporation common and some preferred shares.

Steel Production Climbs in Week To 50% Capacity

New York, July 13.—"While steel production has not yet regained all of its losses of the holiday week, it has snapped back to a 50 per cent rate for the industry, with indications that additional units will be active again late this week or early next week," says the weekly survey of Iron Age today, which continues:

"This rise in operations is occurring despite the strike of tool and die makers at General Motors plants, which has crippled work on 1940 models and has held up some steel releases.

"In several steel-producing districts, notably Detroit, eastern Pennsylvania, Buffalo, Birmingham and the West, operations are higher than they were in the pre-holiday week, while in the Youngstown and Wheeling-Weirton districts the same rate has been attained as before the holiday. The Pittsburgh and Chicago districts are only one point below their pre-holiday rate.

"In the Birmingham district 17 open hearth furnaces are in operation against 14 the early part of last week. The Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co. has put on another blast furnace, which places all of its furnaces in operation, and its Ensley rail mill is resuming this week. There has been a sharp rise at Detroit, where one plant has added two open hearths.

"In the first half of this year steel ingot production gained 73 per cent over the corresponding period last year, while pig iron output was almost 60 per cent higher. The total for ingot production was 18,629,927 gross tons against 10,788,583 tons in the same period last year, an average rate this year of 52.74 per cent

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

One hundred and ninety-five acres are being transferred by Presidential proclamation from the Beaverhead National Forest to the Big Hole National Monument.

And that brings up the Nez Perce Indians who got their name from French trappers because they wore rings in their noses. The Nez Perce, lead by Chief Thunder-Over-the-Mountain, refused to set up housekeeping on the Government reservations, and the bloody battle of August 9 and 10, 1877, was the result. The 195 acres added to Big Hole now bring within the monument all the area included in the feud.

Chief Thunder-Over-the-Mountain really didn't want to fight about it. He was keeping a promise he had made to his father, Old Joseph, in 1872. Old Joseph, who had gotten his name from an earnest missionary, was as scrappy a chief as ever put on a war bonnet to ride to a raid. "Don't sign any papers giving up your native territory," he said to his son. So Thunder kept his word and kept scarce of lawyers.

When he received a 30-day notice to send his people to a reservation, the braves of the tribe raided the ranches of nearby white settlers . . . and the war was on.

Oh yes, and in case you didn't know, Big Hole is out in Montana.

SO FAR YOU'LL have 24 ways to vote for "Miss Popularity" on the IDRA moonlight cruise next Tuesday. Groming for the marathon (moon or dark) are the following contestants from the Interior Department: Mary Louise Rogers, Sophie Tritch, Louise Metcalf and Helen Cranston, all of NPS; Esther Marchant, Naomis Smith and Nell Courtney, all from the heap big Indian office; Thekla Reinmuth, Evelyn Dada, both of USHA; Mary Eldridge, Vera Tyler, Janaan Leonard, Kitty O'Farrell, Helen Pawl, Patricia Mason, Jerry Teasley, Louise Kearney and Harriet Prim, from the PWA outfit; and Louise M. Carr, Rose Marie Jackson, Frances Kline, Louise Whitefield, Virginia Fennell and Mary Barry, from other divisions.

Your ticket to the gangplank of the "City of Washington" is your ballot. Let X mark the winner, and no preferences barred.

A SPECIAL recreational center or stadium, one of the larger ideas of the interdepartmental conferences on recreation, will have to wait for a mass of other details, but according to Joe Cooper of the Agriculture personnel staff, it's an objective that ultimately will be accomplished. The funds for building it or for securing space now existing may come from Federal employes' pockets, from Government appropriations, or from private contributions.

The questionnaire recently circulated among various departments as to a co-ordinated recreational program is the outcome of discussions in which personnel directors took active parts. Stenographic reports were made of each of the discussions, which began about a month and a half ago, and the questionnaire was developed from these minute-by-minute records.

"We don't want the questionnaires back right away," says Cooper. "We want the departments to give them real study. Everyone has been asking that something be done for a long time. Now it's going to be done right."

GREEN GROW the laurels: For Frederic L. Kirgis newly appointed director of the newly established Consumers Counsel Division for the National Bituminous Coal Commission. Kirgis, formerly first assistant solicitor of the Interior Department, has an academic background that bears repeating. His degrees include a J. S. D. from Yale University and a J. D. from the College of Law of the University of Illinois. On his watch chain he may sport a Phi Beta Kappa key, and he is also a member of the Order of the Coif. Though he now lives in Alexandria, Va., he retains Illinois as his legal residence.

Kirgis came to Interior in 1933 where he served first as an assistant solicitor and a member of the Board of Appeals. In 1936 he became chief aid to Solicitor Margold.

During 1932-33 he held a teaching fellowship at Yale and the year preceding that he was a member of the faculty at the U. of Illinois.

The job of the Consumers Counsel: To appear in the interest of the public in any proceeding before the bituminous coal division of the Interior Department.

THE TVA is taking the franking restrictions pretty seriously. It has even extended the censor to paper towels. Evidently the powers that be tired of seeing wastebaskets snowed under by paper blizzards. Therefore the office service department is circulating a series of towels practically covered with a neat print job and suitable for framing. The motto, which is a good one, says, "This paper towel is wasted unless it suggests to you the savings possible in the 2,500,000 towels used annually in the authority . . . A little waste goes a long way."

Now, if someone could only think up a thrifty slogan for rubber bands, and carbon paper and paper clips.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

F. F. sat down to play as partner of a charming but strange player of the lovely sex and found himself taking a set of four tricks, doubled and vulnerable, on a hand in which he should have won the rubber. He was partly to blame in that he made a bid to score which sounded to his partner like a slam invitation.

He apologized for his bidding by saying:

"My wife hates cards and an old lone married man has trouble getting a game. So I play wherever and whenever I can and I run into various sorts of card play. I may have been stretching my opening bid, but the temptation was great.

"I had never played with this charming partner before, but took it for granted she watched the score. Needing only 60 points for rubber I bid three diamonds, holding these cards:

SOUTH
♠K6
♡K2
◇KQJ987
♣A42

"I hoped partner would keep still and not bid, but she said, 'What does he mean by that?' And East, her daughter, said, 'He wants you to show your ace,' so she bid three spades. I went to four diamonds and she said five clubs. I bid five diamonds and West doubled, ouch!

"Here is North's hand:

♠A74
♡54
◇32

"West opened with the spade 10 which I let drift around to my king and then led my club ace and four, hoping to split the remaining clubs and have a long club in dummy for a re-entry. West, after a look at dummy, cast off a heart on the club and East took the king and queen of clubs and played the queen of hearts. I covered with the king and West won with the ace and took the next heart trick with the jack.

"He next led a spade to the ace in dummy. I played another club from North which I had to trump with the king to force out the ace. It came out all right, being West's sole trump. West returned her last spade, which I trumped in my hand and then I had to lead trumps, losing one diamond to East's ten. I went down four tricks, doubled vulnerable. 'Ain't that sumpin?'"

PULITZER PRIZE NOVEL

THE YEARLING

By Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings

Chapter XXXVIII

THERE WAS NO place to put the calf where it would be dry. Yet the Baxters needed the milk as badly. He decided to wait and ask his father, coming back again if necessary. He fought his way outside and plodded to the house. The rain blinded him. The clearing seemed alien and unfriendly. He was glad to push open the door and to be again inside the house. The kitchen seemed safe and intimate. He made his report on conditions.

M. K. Rawlings

Penny said, "Best leave the calf stay with its mammy, a time like this. We kin make out without milk 'til mornin'. Hit'll shorely be clare by then."

MORNING BROUGHT no abatement. Penny paced up and down the kitchen.

He said, "My daddy told of a storm in the '50's was mightly bad, but I don't reckon all Floridy history has had sich a rain."

The days passed with no change. Ma Baxter usually left the weather in Penny's hands, but now she cried, and sat rocking with her hands folded. On the fifth day, Penny and Jody made a rush to the pea field to pull enough cow-peas for a meal or two. The peas were flattened. They pulled up the whole vines with their backs to the rain and wind. They stopped at the smokehouse for a piece of pickled meat from the bear Buck Forrester had shot on his last night with them. Penny remembered that his wife was short of cooking grease. They tipped the can that held the golden bear grease and filled a stone crock. They laid the meat over the top to protect it and rushed for the house.

The cow-peas were already moulding on the outside, but the peas inside were still firm and good. Supper was again a feast. There was the wild honey to fall back on, and Ma Baxter made a pudding sweetened with its rich flavor, tasting faintly of wood and smoke.

Penny said, "Don't seem possible it'll not clare by mornin,' but if so be 'tain't, Jody, you and me had best git out in it and pull as many peas as we can manage."

Ma Baxter said, "But how'll I keep 'em?"

"Cook 'em, woman, and warm 'em ever' day, if need be."

The morning of the sixth day was exactly like the others. Since they would be drenched in any case, Penny and Jody stripped to their breeches and went to the field with sacks. They worked until noon in the downpour, pulling the slippery pods from the bushes. They came in for a hurried dinner and went back again without troubling to change their clothes. They covered most of the field. The hay, Penny said, was a total loss, but they would do what they could to save the peas. Some of the pods were mature. They spent the evening and late into the night shelling the peas, sticky and mouldering. Ma Baxter built up a slow fire on the hearth and spread out the peas close to the heat to dry. Jody was awakened several times in the night by the sound of some one going out to the kitchen to replenish the fire.

THE MORNING of the seventh day might have been the morning of the first. The gusty wind whipped around the house as though it had always blown and always would blow. The sound of the rain on the roof and in the rainbarrels was now so familiar that it was not noticed. At daylight, a limb of the chinaberry crashed to the ground. The Baxters sat silently at breakfast.

Ma Baxter snapped, "Find the good in it, that's right."

"They ain't no good in it. Lest it is to remind a man to be humble, for there's nary thing on earth he kin call his own."

After breakfast he took Jody to the cornfield. The corn had been broken on the stalks before the storm. The stalks were beaten to the ground but the ears were unharmed. They gathered them and brought them into the warm dry refuge of the kitchen.

Ma Baxter said, "I ain't got the peas dried yit. How'll I dry all this"

Penny did not answer but went to the front room and kindled a fire on the hearth. Jody went outside to bring in more wood. The wood was soaked through, but when the fat-wood was heated a little while it would burn. Penny strewed the ears of corn on the floor.

He said to Jody, "Now your job be to keep changin' it, so's it'll all git a mite o' the heat."

Ma Baxter said, "How's the cane"

"Hit's flat."

"What you reckon has happened to the 'taters?"

He shook his head. In the late afternoon he went to the sweet potato field and dug enough for supper. They were beginning to rot. By trimming, some were usable. Again, supper seemed lavish, because of the sweet potatoes.

Penny said, "If they ain't no change by morning,' we jest as good to quit fightin' and lay down and die."

Jody had never heard his father speak so disconsolately. It froze him through. Flag was showing the effect of short rations. His ribs and backbone were visible. He bleated often. Penny had given up all attempt to milk the cow, for the sake of the calf.

In the middle of the night Jody awakened and thought he heard his father about. It seemed to him the rain was falling less violently. He was asleep again before he could be certain. He awakened on the morning of the eight day. Something was different. There was silence instead of tumult. The rain had stopped. The long winds were still. A light the color of pomegranate blossoms sifted through the gray, wet atmosphere. Penny flung all the doors and windows wide open.

"'Taint much of a world to go out to," he said, "but let's all go out and be thankful there's a world at all."

The dogs pushed past him and bounded out side by side. Penny smiled.

"Dogged if 'taint like goin' outen the Ark," he said. "The animals, two by two—Ory, come go out with me."

Jody jumped about and leaped down the steps with the fawn.

"We're the two deer," he called.

Ma Baxter looked across the fields and began to cry again. But the air, Jody felt, was cool and sweet and gracious. The fawn shared his feeling and bounded over the yard-gate with swift twinkling heels. The world was devastated with the flood, but it was indeed, as Penny kept reminding his wife, the only world they had.

THE SECOND DAY after the storm, Buck and Mill-wheel Forrester came riding to the island to see whether all was well with the Baxters. They had come straight from their own work of caring for the stranded stock. Along the main trail the sights, they said, were new in their generation. The flood had played havoc with the small animals. It was agreed that the four of them, Buck and Mill-wheel and Penny and Jody, should make a tour of exploration for some miles around, so that they might know what to expect, in the immediate future, of the movements not only of the game, but of the predatory creatures. The Forresters had brought two dogs, and an extra horse, and asked to have Rip and Julia join them. Jody was excited that he was to be taken.

He asked, "Kin Flag foller along, too?"

Penny turned on him sharply.

"This here is serious," he said. "I'm carryin' you with us to learn you. If you figger on frolickin,' you kin stay home, too."

Jody hung his head. He slipped away and shut Flag in the shed. The sand floor was still soaked and the shed smelled musty, but he made a bed of crocus sacks where the fawn might keep dry. He put out water and feed for it in case he should be long away.

"You stay quiet," he said to it, "and I'll tell you all I see when I come home again."

THE FORRESTERS were well stocked, as always, with amunition. Penny had spent two evenings during the storm in making lowmold shot and in loading his own shells. He had a month's supply filled and capped and ready for use. He filled his shot-bag and polished the barrels of his gun.

He said to the Forresters: "Now I worked a rabbit's foot on you fellers about that wuthless dog I traded you. Any time you crave to use this gun, you say so."

Buck said, "Aint's none of us but Lem mean enough to take it back, Penny, I'll swear, he got so mean, cooped up in the storm, I had to dress him down myself."

"Where's he now?"

Buck spat.

"Gone off to the river, fretted about harm comin' to that tormented gal Twink. Figgerin' on makin' it up with her, and layin' for Oliver. He kin fight it out by hisself this time."

It was decided to make a wide circle that would take in both Baxter's and Forresters' islands, Juniper Springs, Hopkins Prairie and the good deer territory where the live oak islands that lifted from the marshy saw-grass would certainly have provided refuge for the animals. With the exception of a rolling ridge to the west, toward the Ocklawaha River, the Baxter's Island terrain was the highest in the scrub. But it dropped down all around to low land, and the circle they had mapped out would tell the story. They would try to return to Forresters' Island to sleep, but if that was not practicable they would camp wherever night found them. Penny filled a knapsack carefully. He put in a frying pan, salt, meal, a side of bacon and a twist of tobacco. In a crocus sack he put a handful of lighter'd splinters, a botttle of thin lard and a bottle of panther oil which he treasured for his rheumatism. The exposure during the days of storm had brought his aches on him with vicious force. He had no meat for the dogs.

Buck said, "We kin shoot somethin' for 'em."

To Be Continued Tomorrow.
